Bakers Reject As Ruinous Code Wanted By President

Billion-Dollar Industry on 'Verge of Collapse,' Roosevelt Told.

Refusal Is First In Major Fields

Spokesman Says Added Costs Can't Be Paid by Consumers.

Months of wrangling between NRA and the $1,000,000,000-a-year baking industry culminated yesterday in rejection by the National Baking Council of a code approved last week by President Roosevelt.

This was the first major compact turned down by an industry after it had received White House sanction. The chief complaint by Henry Stude, council chairman, was that the code could not be enforced.

Stude wrote the President the 25,000 bakeries involved already hovered "on the verge of collapse" because of additional expenses attributed to NRA.

"In a recent survey of 31 leading industries," he reported, "all except the baking industry showed a splendid improvement for the first quarter of this year, compared to last. We suffered a decline.

"We pay millions of dollars for the benefit of the farmer in processing taxes on wheat, shortening and sugar. We pay a higher commodity price on all the goods we buy. Under the NRA we have shortened hours and increased wages. All these added costs we have been unable to collect from the consumer."

The council, Stude added, will refuse to serve as code authority for the industry because it does not wish to undertake a hopeless job.

Refuses "Hopeless Burden."

He said his organization "can not assume responsibility for a task which it knows in advance can never be accomplished. Nothing could be worse for the industry and NRA than an unenforced code."

In his letter to the President Stude protested:

"The letter * * * is a petition for relief from what has been imposed upon us without our assent. If we are compelled to adhere to it, it will not only bring further grief to the members of our industry, but the increased cost will produce a consumer reaction that will add to our problems. * * *

"We are a large industry, Mr. President. We do a business of more than $1,000,000,000 a year. We have 200,000 employes. But we are not 'big business.'

Average of Employes Is Eight.

"There are 25,000 of us. Our average number of employes is eight. Sixty per cent of our number are 'little fellows,' many of whom have the shop in the back, the store in the front and live upstairs.

"We call your attention to these things, Mr. President, not in complaint, not in any attempt to evade responsibility, but in order that you may know our condition and our problems—upon which we ask your executive judgment."

Reasons for the council's code rejection included Mr. Roosevelt's orders suspending a prohibition of premiums in the sale of bread, elimination of a five-day waiting period written into provisions for the filing of open prices by all bakers and a requirement that the labor provisions of the code be reopened after 90 days.

Indiana Killer Suspect Taken

Police Declare Prisoner Confessed Shooting to Sweetheart.

Bloomington, Ind., June 6 (AP).—Edward Coffin, named by two accomplices as the youth who killed a Scott County deputy sheriff and wounded a Seymour policeman Monday night, was captured by Bloomington police this afternoon.

Coffin was captured when he returned to his apartment to change clothes. He was dressed in overalls.

Police immediately questioned him. Previously they said they obtained statements from his sweetheart, Pauline Meadows, 18, and Mrs. Robert Neal, 16, that Coffin told them last night he fired the shots which killed Deputy Harold Amick and wounded John Pfaffenberger, Seymour policeman.

Garment Trade Facing General Strike Threat

Chicago, June 6 (AP).—Power to call strikes affecting 45,000 workers was voted today by the International Ladies Garment Workers Union.

A Nation-wide strike may be resorted to in July, when work on winter garments begins, if efforts to organize plants having no operating contracts with the union, about 15 per cent of the total, are unavailing, the union decided in its annual convention.

Windsor Lad Victor In Derby at Epsom

This picture, radioed to New York from London, shows Windsor Lad, an outsider in the betting, winning the 156th running of the English Derby at Epsom Downs. Easton is second and Colombo, the favorite, third.

By Gayle Talbot.

Epsom Downs, England, June 6 (AP).—Amid tense silence that testified to the disappointment of the multitude of spectators, Windsor Lad, flying the silks of the Indian potentate, the Maharaja of Rajpipla, ran the legs off the wonder horse, Colombo, in the last uphill furlong to win the 151st Epsom Derby today.

The entire royal family and perhaps a half million subjects of his majesty, King George, saw the hitherto unbeaten Lord Glanely's Colombo, favorite at 11 to 8, move up and make his challenge in dramatic fashion in the final straightaway only to falter before Windsor Lad's closing burst of speed.

Lord Woolavington's Easton, purchased only a few weeks ago for $75,000 from Ralph Strassburger, of Philadelphia, finished under a whip

House Votes Tariff Power To President

Approves Senate Changes to Give Roosevelt Greatest Role.

By Robert C. Albright.

Concurring in Senate amendments, the House yesterday voted the President the greatest power ever granted one man over this Nation's tariff structure, then laid the completed bill on the White House doorstep.

Passage came on a standing vote of 154 to 53. The bill never went to conference. Last night only the President's signature was needed to lend force to legislation, extending his authority to raise or lower tariff rates 50 per cent by international bargaining agreements.

All 14 Senate amendments to the reciprocal tariff measure, 11 of which were largely clarifying, were agreed to in less than an hour, completing the measure's long and contested road through Congress.

Sole Arbiter of Rates.

By signing his name, the President assures for himself the right to juggle tariff rates and duties in negotiating reciprocal trade agreements with foreign nations, whenever he finds an adjustment advantageous in obtaining beneficial concessions.

Under this sweeping authorization, the President may negotiate trade treaties without the traditional "advice and consent" of the Senate.

Arguing the merits of the legislation, Administration supporters envisioned a plan under which the White House might expand American trade on new foreign frontiers,

Texas Hail Storm Kills 1,000 Sheep, 23 Cattle

Alpine, Tex., June 6 (AP).—Reports reached here today of a hail storm in the Iron Mountain sector north of Marathon, Tex., yesterday that killed 1,000 sheep and 23 head of cattle on the Walter Skinner ranch.

Havana Store Bombed; One Dies, Another Hurt

Roosevelt Signs Stock Mart Control Bill; Matthews Hinted for Board.

James M. Landis, crusading lawyer son of a Presbyterian missionary, was considered virtually certain last night to become the Administration's No. 1 tamer of Wall Street wolves under the rigid new Federal stock market control act.

President Roosevelt signed the act at noon yesterday. It takes effect July 1. Then, for the first time in history, market manipulation becomes a Federal penal offense carrying heavy fines, imprisonment and civil liability.

The President said he had given no thought to selection of the new commission of five that will administer the act.

Matthews Also Mentioned.

But authoritative quarters said Landis, now member of the Federal Trade Commission in charge of enforcement of the 1933 securities act, was a certainty for a place on the board and probably its chairmanship. George C. Matthews, Wisconsin liberal of the La Follette school and also a Roosevelt appointee to the Trade Commission, is another expected selection. The new board will take over administration of the 1933 act from the Trade Commission.

Commission members are subject to Senate confirmation. To avoid a possible Senate flare-up now, the President may delay appointments until Congress adjourns. Then he can make recess appointments, the commission can function and the nominations will go to the Senate next January.

Los Angeles, June 6 (AP).—Six deaths have occurred in the 453 cases of infantile paralysis reported to the county health department recently, Dr. J. L. Pomeroy, county health officer, said today.

Dr. Pomeroy said the six were among the first cases discovered and the victims were in advanced stages before the illness was reported.

Baer, on Advice of Dempsey, Seeks Week's Delay in Bout

New York, June 6 (AP).—Genuine worry over Max Baer's physical condition—or a neat bit of ballyhoo—caused the handlers of the challenger for Primo Carnera's heavyweight title to proclaim today the necessity for a week's postponement of the original date set for June 14.

Down in Asbury Park, N. J., where the night club nabob has been puffing and hauling through his workouts, Ancil Hoffman, his manager, and Jack Dempsey, his adviser, took a long look and decided Max couldn't possibly be ready for the 15-round duel in Madison Square Garden Bowl one week from tomorrow night.

"If I were Hoffman I'd ask for a postponement, said Dempsey critically, "so as to have the young man in perfect shape. He has seven days left to work and that's not enough. I think he'll come through all right and be the Baer that knocked off Schmeling, but it will require plenty of hard work. Carnera is ready now. Baer isn't."

Hoffman thought that over for a while and then announced that he'd appear at the New York State

Steel Strike Held Nearer; Truce Fails

Aarons Advise Johnson Open Shop Will Not Be Granted.

NRA Chief and Aidse Fly to N. Y. in Effort to Avert Strike.

New York, June 6 (U.P.).—A steel strike became a virtual certainty tonight when leaders representing 99 per cent of the giant of American industry flatly told Gen. Hugh Johnson that they never would agree to a closed shop.

Chiefs of the Amalgamated Steel, Iron and Tin Workers Union, who demanded outright union recognition as the price of peace, claimed 100,000 workers would walk out of steel plants, June 16, if their terms were refused.

Johnson flew here late today with Donald Richberg, NRA attorney, in an effort to reach a formula agreeable to the industrialists and workers.

What terms the NRA administrator and his assistant laid before the sixteen magnates and their attorneys remained secret.

Johnson hurried into the conference, brushing past reporters, and three hours later bolted out of a back door and into a freight elevator to dodge questioners. He emerged from the skyscraper through the basement and was driven away with police escort clearing a path.

New York, June 6 (AP).—Titans of the American steel industry wrestled today with the problem of a threatened general strike at a conference to which Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, National recovery administrator, raced from Washington by airplane.

Directors of the American Iron and Steel Institute, representing employers of 392,000 workers, held sessions behind closed doors.

There was no indication, however, that they had reached any decision on the demands of the Amalgamated Association of Iron and Steel Workers.

Johnson Arrives.

Gen. Johnson, accompanied by Donald Richberg, general counsel for NRA, and Miss Frances Robinson, Johnson's assistant, joined the steel leaders late in the afternoon.

After conferring with steel leaders approximately two and a half hours, Gen. Johnson and his aids left the meeting to return to Washington and the institute directors continued their session. Gen. Johnson declined to comment on the discussion.

It was indicated by the institute that directors had discussed the general labor situation and had not touched on possible means of solving the threatened walkout before Gen. Johnson's arrival.

Institute spokesmen repeated that the issue was on the "closed shop" and not on the principle of collective bargaining.

Minimize Reports.

The employers were represented as minimizing the seriousness of the strike threat.

"At least 85 per cent of the workers do not want a strike," one official said.

Gen. Johnson was expected to present the employers a proposal for solving the labor problems of the steel industry with the same formula used in settling the automobile strike earlier in the year, although labor leaders already had declared themselves opposed to the proposed plan.

Sixteen members of the institute's directorate, representing all the large companies and many of the smaller units, attended the conference.

Boy Killer of Classmate Committed to Asylum

Victoria, B. C., June 6 (AP).—Frank Millen, 14, Powell River boy acquitted of murdering his schoolmate, John MacFarlane, 10, was committed to the insane asylum today.

The court acquitted Millen "because of insanity," and recommended sterilization. MacFarlane's body was found buried in a sand pit.

Six Killed In Worker Strike War

Gen. Berenguer, Woman Among Victims of Spanish Clashes.

Million Rural Laborers Out and Labor May Soon Drop Tools.

Madrid, June 6 (U.P.).—Six persons, including one woman, were killed today when farm laborers, swinging axes and scythes, rose in violent strikes for better working conditions.

Gen. Fernando Berenguer, brother of former Prime Minister Damaso Berenguer, was assassinated by gunmen near San Sebastian.

Gen. Berenguer was slain while proceeding along the Hernani highway to meet his brother.

Farm leaders estimated 1,000,000 workers were affected by the walkout. Labor organizations threatened to walk out in sympathy in a new general strike paralyzing the nation.

Government buildings were closely guarded in Madrid and other major cities. The cabinet of Prime Minister Ricardo Samper held hurried sessions to consider means of combating the rising tide of unrest.

The temper of the farm hands was evidenced in clashes in several localities. A mob of striking landworkers overran the village of Torreperogil, sweeping through the town, killing one and seriously wounding another employer.

At Sabiote, a woman was killed by a volley of shots when an infuriated band of farmers fired on the son of a landed proprietor. Another mob set fire to cottages before being beaten off by police.

One fatal incident was reported during riots at the village of Vilches, where farmers clashed with police.

At Alconchel, two strikers and a civil guardsman were killed in a fight when 50 peasant strikers sought to intimidate a band of non-strikers.

Two farmhouses were burned at Jerena. Bombs were exploded in doorways of San Isidoro and San Vincente churches and Calmas Convent at Seville.

One of Spain's best crops in years was endangered by the strike.

Third Child, Son, Born to Belgian King and Queen

Brussels, June 6 (U.P.).—A son was born tonight to King Leopold and Queen Astrid of the Belgians. He is the second son and the third child of the royal couple.

The oldest child is the Princess Josephine Charlotte, aged 6. Heir to the throne is Crown Prince Baudoin, who will be 4 years old September 7.

Leopold III, 32, succeeded his father, King Albert, February 23, after death of Albert in a fall while mountain climbing. He married Princess Astrid of Sweden in November, 1926.

3 Killed, Score Hurt In Colombian Strike

Medellin, Colombia, June 6 (AP).—Three men were killed and a score wounded here today in a clash between troops and striking railroad men.

After police and soldiers had dispersed the workers, a group followed the bearers who were taking away the corpses, shouting "down with the army." A State of siege was regarded as likely.

Bullet Kills Dog Trapped on Ledge

Chicago, June 6 (AP).—A bullet today ended the life of a dog which was hopelessly trapped on a recessed ledge 200 feet down the wall of an abandoned quarry.

After all humane agencies, the police and firemen had agreed there was no way to save the animal from starvation, Sergt. Edward Bezarick shot it with a rifle. No one knows how the dog got to the shelf.

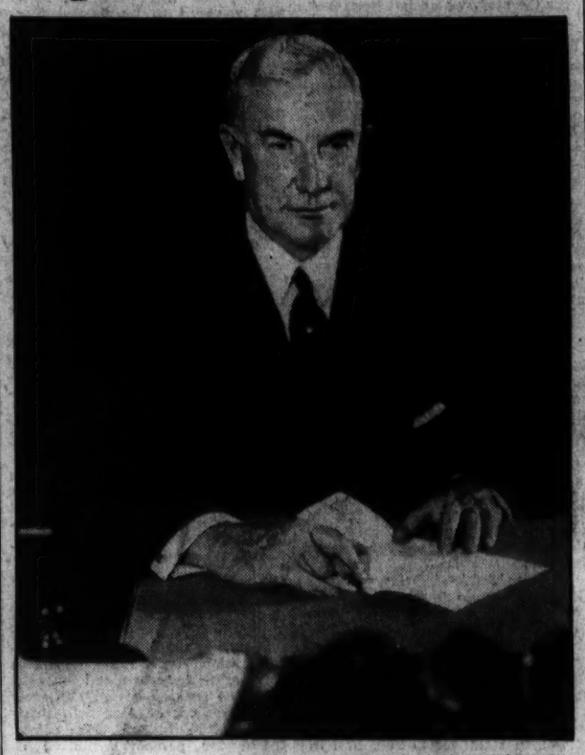
G.O.P. Names Fletcher Chairman and Unites For Comeback Fight

Republicans on 'Hill' Split Over Fletcher



Underwood & Underwood.

HENRY P. FLETCHER.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Although House Republicans lauded the selection of Henry P. Fletcher, of Pennsylvania, as new chairman of the Republican National Committee, Senate Republicans, in general, made sour faces when informed of the action taken at Chicago.

The Senate progressives denounced the Fletcher selection outright or they were contemptuously silent. The conservative Republicans in the Senate, when not cold toward Fletcher, made brief, unenthusiastic statements that he was "a good man" or words to that effect.

The objection of the latter group was not directed against Fletcher personally, but at the fact that he is an Easterner and, in the view of some, aligned with the wing of the party dominated by the big-busi-

By Raymond Clapper.

Chicago, June 6.—The Republican National Committee elected former Ambassador Henry P. Fletcher, of Pennsylvania, as its new National chairman today, after adopting a broad statement of principles intended to unite conservative and progressive forces against permanent continuation of "dictatorial powers" placed in President Roosevelt's hands during the emergency.

Arrangements were made to get the revamped party machinery into action at once. Ambassador Fletcher left his home at Greencastle, Pa., for Chicago to meet with the executive committee of the party tomorrow. Plans will be made immediately for close cooperation with the joint Congressional campaign committee in pressing the battle for re-election of Republican Senators and Representatives.

Fletcher Ready for Work.

Immediately after vote tabulations were completed, Fletcher was notified officially. At his Pennsylvania home he issued the following statement:

"I accept the chairmanship of the Republican National committee and heartily subscribe to the statement of principles adopted by the committee. I shall welcome the advice and assistance of all who are willing to work for Republican success. Please express to the committee my appreciation of the honor they have done me and my realization of the responsibility of the office. I am ready to go to work at once."

The statement was read to the committee.

Senator Daniel O. Hastings, co-chairman of the Congressional committee, was asked to be in Chicago tomorrow to sit with the National executive committee. The other co-chairman, Representative Chester

U. S. Agents Watch Nazi 'Spy' Hearing

Dickstein, Infuriated, Beats Table; Probe Reveals New Operations.

By Frank Getty.

Under the watchful eyes of Department of Justice agents and unofficial observers for the Postoffice and Labor Departments, the House Nazi investigating committee worked its hearing up to table-pounding heat yesterday, with Representative Dickstein (Democrat), New York, shouting denunciation of "alien spies."

Chairman McCormack gracefully hushed the disturbance, admonished his colleague, and had one of the Nazi "big three" in this country on the verge of tears and repentance with his deft, courteous questioning.

Representatives of other branches of the Government, who mingled inconspicuously with the two score spectators, heard witnesses testify to the spread of the Nazi movement in the United States, the dissemination of propaganda throughout the country, the participation of German consuls in the work and the importation of films from Germany in the interest of Hitler's cause.

It also developed that Nazi sym-

Vare Loses Philadelphia G. O. P. Reins

Former Followers Turn on Leader to Elect Edwin R. Cox.

Philadelphia, June 6 (AP).—Control of the Republican organization of Philadelphia today passed from the last of the Vares.

George, Ed and Bill in the last 30 years held a tight grip on part or all of the organization, but today Bill—William S. Vare—the last of the three brothers, was eliminated as head of the party. No new leader was named.

His elimination was accomplished by former followers. It came with the election of Edwin R. Cox as chairman of the city committee after James M. Hazlett, Vare candidate for reelection, saw he was beaten and withdrew.

Not only was his candidate eliminated, but Vare's name as honorary chairman vanished, because, in the annual reorganization of the committee, his name was not mentioned for the complimentary title.

Although the action came suddenly there has been unrest in the organization and dissatisfaction with Vare for some time. This was shown in the election of last November when the party lost two city offices to a combination of independent Republicans and Democrats.

Vare, at his Atlantic City summer home, had nothing to say when he heard the news. He still is a Pennsylvania member of the Republican National Committee. In the election of Henry P. Fletcher, of Pennsylvania, to the National chairmanship at Chicago today, Vare's son-in-law, Dr. John J. Shaw, was his proxy.

Harvard Roosevelts Rescue Yale From Crew Shortage

President Roosevelt, who attended Harvard, and young Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., who pulls an oar for the Harvard freshman crew, united yesterday in rescuing Yale from the embarrassment of losing a member of her junior varsity crew.

When the President arrived at the executive offices, this telegram addressed to Marvin H. McIntyre, his assistant secretary, became the first order of business for the day:

"Just received telegram from friend on Yale varsity who says that David Livingston, rowing No. 6 on junior varsity, can not go to New London to race against Harvard because of R. O. T. C. engineering camp. Apparently no Senators have been able to excuse him and they wish father to intervene as soon as possible, if anything can be done. See you at races, I hope.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT, Jr."

In high good spirits, the President read the message to newspapermen and turned to Stephen T. Early, his other assistant secretary (who stands ace high with the War Department, he said), with the request that he exercise his influence.

Result: Young Livingston will row against Harvard, and the President hopes to be in New London for the regatta June 23, too.

Germans Mob Foreign Stores

Berlin, June 6 (AP).—The Nazi campaign against department stores was revived today, ostensibly as a well-organized retaliatory action against boycotts of German products abroad.

In several cities mobs gathered about stores of the F. W. Woolworth Co., shouting and daubing the building with paint.

German representatives of the Woolworth company denied there was any foundation for the charge that the company has joined a boycott on German goods in the United States. A buyer is on his way here from New York now, they said, and Canadian buyers have been here.

Numerous newspapers commended the action of the angry crowds, which forced several stores to close. The newspapers repeated their charges that an attack on German commerce in international markets is being fostered by Jews.

Windows of the Woolworth store at Kassel were smashed. At Bonn a store was daubed with paint. Crowds in Ludwigshafen and Breslau gathered about the branches of the firm, shouting and sticking up posters advising persons not to buy.

Brothers Rushed Away From Mob

Kentuckians Are Held in Attack on Women.

Memphis, Tenn., June 6 (AP).—Rescued from a mob that threatened to storm the Dyersburg Jail, two youthful Kentucky brothers wanted in connection with attacks on three women, one of whom was 78 years old, tonight were held in the "attack proof" Memphis Jail.

The prisoners, who identified themselves as William Nunnley, 26, and George Nunnley, 23, of Louisville, were smuggled out of the Dyer County Jail last night by Sheriff A. H. Newbill.

Advised that several carloads of Kentuckians were en route from Smithland, Ky., to Dyersburg to join a crowd already there in a raid on the jail, Sheriff Newbill hurried the two out of the back door of the jail, wrapped in sheets, put them in a waiting car and drove to Memphis.

ness, wealthy Republicans of the East. The feeling seemed to be that a mistake had been made in not going beyond the Mississippi River for a chairman.

Wise Choice, Say Others.

In contrast to the reaction of the Senate Republicans, pary members in the House hailed Fletcher's selection as a wise choice. Some of the House Republicans showed enthusiasm over the National committee's choice, maintaining that a better man could not be found.

On Capitol Hill, especially in the Senate, Fletcher is regarded as a novice in the rough-and-tumble of political party management. He is regarded as a genial, wealthy man who has devoted most of his life to statesmanship, to diplomacy, rather than to the mechanics of ward, county, State and National politics.

A Hard Hitter.

Yet Fletcher frequently has appeared on the political rostrum and a speech made by him to western Maryand Republicans gathering at Hagerstown last March—generally unnoticed at the time—shows him to be a hard hitter. This speech throws considerable light on Fetcher's present political views. While opposed to the Roosevelt "New Deal," he appears to be, from his speech, a middle-of-the-road conservative who has no wish to go back to some of the conditions existing in 1929.

In his Hagerstown speech, Fletcher asserted that while Mussolini had publicly declared that "representative government was an outworn eighteenth century formua" and had acted on that conviction, the "National planners" in this country were parading as "liberals."

"If Wallace and Tugwel and Frankfurter & Co. are liberals," he added, "then Stalin and Hitler are liberals and Jefferson and Jackson were Tories."

Further on he said that "the Democratic-Socialistic tide is in full flow" and likened the Republican party to a King Canute commanding this wave to recede. But he held that his party must fight on, opposing principles it regards as unsound.

Answers Criticism.

Still further on, Fletcher said:

"I should, perhaps, stop here to answer a taunt always thrown at the Republican party since November, 1932. They say we must not criticize because for four years we were in power and did nothing and that at least Roosevelt is doing something.

"What is the actual truth? As a matter of fact, after 1930, we were powerless because the Democrats gained control of the House and did not and would not cooperate in any effective way. As for the President's doing something, many feel that the things he has done, and will be obliged to do, may prove in the end more harmful to the country and to all the people in it than was the stalemate which Democratic partisanship forced on President Hoover.

"We are also taunted with the lack of a constructive Republican program. My answer to that is that the formulation of a program in the present political situation would be a mere rhetorical or academic gesture. In the circumstances we are doing our full duty in opposing as effective as we may such policies as we think harmful to the people. When the house is burning down, the fire must be put out before you can start to rebuild.

"Furthermore, the past mstakes of the Republican party cannot be pleaded to justify the policies now being pursued. If they prove themselves unsound they must be judged and they will be judged solely and only by their effect on the country."

Deplores Injustices.

Near the conclusion of his speech Fletcher said he wished "to make it clear that Republicans equally with Democrats deplore the injustices and inequalities and the economic weaknesses which have crept into the old system during the last few years."

"The difference between the Republican and Democratic position today," he continued, "is that we still believe that these wrongs and maladjustments could have been rectified without undermining the foundations of our social order, while the Democrats, under their revolutionary policy of State-socialism and bureaucratic regimentation, are changing—without a mandate from the people—the whole American economic and social system. This is a very serious and continuing menace and one which we must and will combat with all our power."

The Democrats appeared to enjoy some satisfaction over the difficulty the Republicans had in selecting a chairman and in the lack of enthusiasm for Fletcher displayed by the Senate Republicans.

"They seem to have had a hard time agreeing on a chairman and a declaration of policy," observed Democratic Leader Joseph T. Robinson. "So far as I am concerned, I am not disposed to give them any aid, consolation or comfort."

Senators Quoted.

A cross view of the reaction of Senate Republicans is contained in the following expressions regarding Fletcher's selections:

Dickinson, of Iowa (conservative)—"With the withdrawal of Kohler, of Wisconsin, and the inability of the members of the committee from the West to agree on another candidate from the West, the selection had to go East. In going East, I think Fletcher was the best selection available in view of the fact he has been progressive-minded and has the time to give to the position. He is in a position to give the party real leadership."

Norris, of Nebraska (progressive)—Nothing to say.

McNary, of Oregon (Republican Senate leader (conservative)—"A good man, but not a brilliant selection. I had expected the selection of an equally good man from farther west, one of sane and modern views."

LaFollette, of Wisconsin (progressive)—"A clear indication that the protestations of the Old Guard that they intended to liberalize the Republican party—were simply a smokescreen. While I have nothing personally against Mr. Fletcher, the selection is a clear indication that the control of the Republican party nationally remains in the hands of the same old group represented by the Mellons, Reeds and others of that school. Insofar as the organization of the party is represented by the committee is concerned, it is an attempt to return to power the moribund organization whose policies produced the greatest economic depression in the history of the country."

Fine, Says Fess.

Fess, of Ohio (conservative)—"A fine selection, but I wish it had been someone from farther west."

Nye of North Dakota (Progressive)—"I expect and hope for little in view of the gentleman's past."

Borah of Idaho (Progressive)—"I haven't a thing to say. Every one knows what that means."

Vandenberg of Michigan (Conservative)—"I have nothing to say now. I am hopeful they will elect a vicec hairman to dress up the situation."

House Comment.

A cross-section of House Republican comment on the selection of Mr. Fletcher follows:

Minority Leader Bertrand H. Snell—"I think the selection of Henry Fletcher is a very happy solution of the whole problem. I didn't have any candidate of my own. Henry Fletcher has no political scars of any kind. He has been before the public a great many years, is well known and well liked. He is clean, able and energetic, and I think well qualified to hold together the many factions that are bound to exist in any political party. I believe he will do a good job. Fortunoately, they have cleaned up the deficit, so he can start with a clean slate."

Martin, of Massachusetts—"Fletch- is a high types of man and very able. The party is fortunate in getting his services. I think he will make an excellent chairman."

McLeod, of Michigan—"I really do not know much about him, and would rather not make any comment."

Wadsworth, of New York—"I am very well pleased. I think it a fortunate choice."

Treadway, of Massachusetts—"A very suitable and proper selection. I am confident his wide experience and interest in the Republican party will be of great benefit to the party as a whole. He represents no group or clique. He is thoroughly familiar with the job before him."

Focht Sees Victory.

Focht, of Pennsylvania—"If that man has room to operate and is given a chance o exercise his talents, he will place the Republican party in such fighting trim they can win the next House if not the next Presidential election. I am confident he will be able to crystalize the terriffic sentiment developing against these huge Federal expenditures and to date fruitless results. He doesn't represent any faction. He is progressive as the country can stand, without being any wild horse."

Republicans Name Fletcher Chairman, Unite for Campaign

Bolton, of Cleveland, has been here and will attend tomorrow's meeting.

Two Contenders Get Key Jobs.

Unification of National committee factions was advanced by the election of two unsuccessful contenders for the chairmanship to key places in the party set-up. Walter S. Hallanan, West Virginia comitteeman, was named to the executive committee in place of the late David Mulvane, of Kansas. John D. M. Hamilton, Kansas committeeman, was chosen general counsel for the committee in place of the late James Francis Burke, of Pennsylvania.

This solution of the bitter personal fight over the chairmanship, the general approval of the party's new declaration of principles, and the pledging yesterday of more than $206,000 to take care of the left over deficit, combined to make for a feeling of satisfaction among the National committee members over the start which has been made in putting the Republican party back on its feet.

Despite the bitter fight over the chairmanship, Ambassador Fletcher, diplomat and Rough Rider with Theodore Roosevelt, was chosen on the first ballot. He received 67 votes and Hamilton, of Kansas, received 25. Hamilton, a red-headed youngster, who has just broken into the big league of politics, then moved to make the election unanimous. The chief contender against Fletcher, Hallanan, of West Virginia, withdrew just before the committee went into session and joined in seconding the Fletcher nomination.

Victory for Hoover Bloc.

Elimination of the two-fisted Hallanan was a victory for survivors of the Hoover era, who paid off an old score. Hallanan, as a member of the West Virginia convention delegation at the 1928 convention, was active in the "stop-Hoover" movement. That incident came back to plague him here, for the "big three" of the Hoover group. Walter F. Brown, of Ohio; Mark Requa, of California, and Ogden Mills, of New York, were ready to fight him to the end.

Hallanan's friends, the so-called Old Guard, who fought Hoover in 1928—Charles D. Hilles, of New York; Daniel Pomeroy, of New Jersey, and Henry D. Roraback, of Connecticut, finally suggested to Hallanan that in the interests of party harmony he should withdraw, a suggestion which he quickly accepted despite the effort of a bloc of women members to hold him in for a final showdown.

Hallanan forces blamed much of his opposition against Mrs. Ellis A. Yost, former West Virginia committeewoman, who though unseated in 1932 through efforts of Hallanan forces, remained as director of the women's division of the Republican National committee.

Despite this clear-cut line-up and the defeat of the candidate of the old anti-Hoover forces, the election of Fletcher is not so definitely regarded as a victory of the Hoover group inasmuch as he was acceptable to both sides. While advanced by the Hoover group, he is expected to operate in close harmony with the Eastern leaders. For all of the bitterness of the fight, no serious bruises are left.

Centratl Government Hit.

In its declaration of principles, drafted by a committee headed by Hilles, the National committee said the country must determine whether it is to remain a democracy or to substitute the domination of an all-powerful central Government. The New Deal, as such, was not mentioned, nor was President Roosevelt referred to by name. There was no mention of NRA, AAA, or other Roosevelt measures.

The statement declared that the Nation faced problems of infinite complexity—problems of recovery, unemployment, agriculture's lost markets and low prices, of checking abuses and excesses and thereafter "the problems of a wider spread of prosperity, of relieving the hardships of unemployment and old age, and of avoiding these tragic depressions."

"These problems must be approached in a broad, liberal and progressive spirit, unhampered by dead formulas or too obstinately clinging to the past.

"Our country has been backward in legislation dealing with social questions. We welcome the recognition that these questions demand attention by the Government.

"But we must insist that all of these problems can best be solved within the framework of American institutions in accordance with the spirit and principles of the founders of the republic, without the destruction of individual freedom."

Warns of Inflation.

The statement warned that the Administration is committing the country to a possible course of unlimited inflation, that reckless expenditure is saddling a new generation with unbearable financial burdens, that "misguided bureaucrats" are seeking covertly to alter the framework of American institutions, substituting Government control for private initiative in business and agriculture.

There was a flat declaration "that there shall be no further repudiation of solemn obligations of the Government."

The party's creed declared for freedom of speech, of the press and of the radio.

"We believe," it was further declared, "that the present emergency laws vesting dictatorial powers in the President must never be permitted to become a permanent part of our governmental system."

At the suggestion of Representative Hamilton Fish, of New York, a final sentence was added which said:

"We call upon all who believe in the maintenance of these principles to unite in the election of Senators and Representatives who will support them."

The statement as a whole avoided any embarrassment to Republican Senators and Representatives who have supported parts of the Roosevelt program.

Although much was made in earlier discussion about picking a man from the West, the committee actually went farther East than it has since William M. Butler, of Massachusetts, was chosen in the Coolidge Administration. Four chairmen since then have come from Ohio or farther West.

Ambassador Fletcher is not an experienced politician. He served almost a quarter of a century as a diplomat, much of the time abroad. He sat on the United States Tariff Commission under Hoover and, in the last few years has been living in Greencastle, Pa., on the eastern slope near the Maryland border.

His lack of practical political experience was recognized in placing young Hamilton, of Kansas, in as general counsel. The place has been vacant for some time. Its title is misleading, for the job is one with undefined duties, and can be big or little, depending upon the man who holds it. Young Hamilton, 42, a wiry, red-headed go-getter, probably will be used a great deal in field work. It is expected that older leaders on the National committee, such as Hilles, will work closely with Fletcher, advising him as to party matters. Flecher has, so far as is known, never managed a campaign even of local nature, nor run for office himself, so that he may be expected to lean heavily on more experienced men for guidance. A man of wealth, he has many financial and business contacts, which will be useful in raising money.

Heals Party Breach.

Fletcher's election heals the fight between the National Committee and the Joint Congressional Committee. The retiring chairman, Everett Sanders, and the joint committee were at swords points and cooperation between them was entirely absent.

Representative Bolton, co-chairman of the Congressional Committee, said that the election of Fletcher was a happy solution of the committee's problem.

"It may be said that the committee is absolutely behind the new chairman, and cooperation of all who have the interests of the party at heart is assured," Bolton said.

Both District of Columbia committee members voted for Fletcher.

"I feel that the action will result in an effective organization and will contribute largely to successful cooperation in election of Republican Senators and Representatives this fall," said E. F. Colladay, District committeeman.

Mrs. Virginia White Speel, District committeewoman, originally from Pennsylvania, said she was especially happy at the selection of a chairman from that State.

"I am absolutely satisfied with the result and a splendid man has been recognized," she said.

House Passes Tariff Power To Roosevelt through a series of mutually beneficial agreements with other nations, outright heresy to Republican high

Opposing a policy that represents protectionists, the minority party in House and Senate fought the authorization to the end. Their arguments were futile in the face of the House Democratic majority of 200, and Administration insistence that trade recovery can only be assured by such methods.

Moving to concur in the Senate changes, Chairman Robert L. Doughton, of the Ways and Means Committee, argued that only three of the 11 Senate amendments were of any material consequence.

Under one of these, the President before negotiating a reciprocal trade agreement, must not only determine that trade expansion is encouraged, but that foreign tariff barriers are burdening American trade, according to Doughton.

Another Senate change provides the reciprocal tariff law shall not apply to commodities covered by existing trade agreements. Under a third important amendment, all persons likely to be affected by any proposed trade treaty would be given an opportunity to be heard.

OMahoney Reassuring.

While the House was in the throes of debate on the bill, Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney, of Wyoming, told the Senate the President has assured him he has no intention of adversely affecting prices of wool and other commodities by removing protection from them under his new power.

"The new tariff bill has been thought of as one of the emergency measures which would help in the general effort to rehabilitate agriculture and industry alike," read a letter from Mr. Roosevelt to O'Mahoney.

"The wool industry is one of those which needs price protection, and the suggestion that the new tariff bill might used to lower those prices is one which would not have occurred to me."

The President said his "concern that agricultural prices should be protected and w herever possible substantially raised, ought to be well known by this time."

In the House, Representative Allen T. Treadway (Republican), Massachusetts, charged the Senate amendment giving parties affected a right to be heard before consummation of tariff treaties, was a "sop" to Democratic Senators who threatened to oppose the bill.

"Is that not true?" he asked Doughton. "There was so much opposition in the other body to the delegation of power contained in this bill that the Administration had to consent to permit public hearings before the conclusion of any agreement."

Indignantly, Doughton denied the statement.

Representative Frank Crowther (Republican), New York, charged violation of Democratic platform pledges, while Representative Daniel A. Reed (Republican), also of New York, tore into competitive theories he said are espoused by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace.

Defends Little Fellows.

"There has been a new philosophy developed recently," he said, "and it has found expression in frequent utterances by members of the so-called brain trust. It contemplates the abolition of little industries which are found unable to compete with similar industries in other countries. They are called 'inefficient' industries, and would be denied the protection of an American tariff.

"These small industries are scattered throughout the country and are of vital importance. Entire communities depend on them, and they can not exist without protection that may be denied under this bill."

Representative Jere Cooper (Democrat), Tennessee, told the House "there is more real hope for the people in this measure than in any legislation we have passed." He called it "the capstone of the entire recovery program."

Representative Ralph Lozier, Missouri Democrat, said he resented "reflections" cast on the President by Republican charges that he might abuse his tariff powers.

Quezon Group Controls Philippine Legislature

Manila, P. I., June 7 (U.P.).—Gradually mounting election returns today indicated that Manuel Quezon and his forces will control the House as well as the Senate of the Philippine Legislature.

Important in Quezon's triumph was the defeat of Camilo Osias and Rafael Palma, Senatorial candidates. Osias, now a resident commissioner in the United States, had aligned himself with the Roxas group opposing Quezon.

Fletcher Noted as Diplomat

New G. O. P. Chairman Unskilled in Politics, Yet as Tariff Expert He Is Expected to Direct Big Drive on Roosevelt Program.

Characterized as an able diplomat and lawyer with rather less political experience than his new post would seem to require, Henry P. Fletcher, of Pennsylvania, new chairman of the National Republican committee, has been known through his varied career for ability to see a way out of disturbing and unsatisfactory conditions.

In one campaign capacity, at least Fletcher was termed an expert yesterday in official circles here. Republicans expect to cannonade the Nation this year and next with criticism of the Roosevelt reciprocal tariff program. As chairman of President Hoover's Tariff Commission, he steeped himself in the lore of international trade barriers, and is qualified to direct the Republican barrage.

Use for Fletcher's talents were found by seven Presidents in succession from McKinley to Hoover. Envoy of the United States to three nations, he was last before the public eye as chairman of the Tariff Commission during 1931. His appointment as head of the commission came, when tired from 32 years of public service, he was resting after resigning as Ambassador to Italy.

With Ford Against NRA.

Fletcher lined up with Henry Ford last October in his controversy with the National Recovery Administration. He wired Ford: "I trust the action of yohr company may make it possible for the American people to find odt how far Gen. Johnson and the Administration may go in their effort to control or intimidate law-abiding citizens. * * * When the Government threatens to resort to compdlsion, discrimination and boycott, it is time for self-respecting Americans to assert their inalienable right and find out if these rights still exist."

Fletcher was born at Greencastle, Pa., April 19, 1873. He married the former Beatrice Bend, of New York, in 1917 while Ambassador to Mexico. There are no children.

Even at 18, when his father could not afford college tuition, Fletcher displayed the determination marking his later life by studying law in his uncle's office and being admitted to the bar three years later.

He joined Theodore Roosevelt's Rough Riders as a private during the Spanish-American War after three applications to enlist had failed. President Roosevelt recognized the young man at the conclusion of war by naming him second legation secretary in troubled Cuba. Thus began a long career as diplomat which included secretaryships in China and Portugal, and ambassadorships in Chile, Italy and Mexico.

It was during the difficult "Dollar Diplomacy" days of 1907 that he was in China. He was Ambassador to Mexico when the famous note by Arthur Zimmerman, German secretary of state, inviting Mexico to become a World War ally of the Central Powers, was intercepted in Washington. The note, offering Mexico annexation of Texas, New Mexico and Arizona as reward, was one of the moving causes in America's declaration of war six weeks later.

Served as Hughes' Aid.

A year after resigning the Mexican post in 1920, he reentered public life as Undersecretary of State and aided Hughes in reorganizing the State Department under President Harding. Later, he served on the arms limitations and Pan-American Conference and was named Ambassador to Italy in 1924 by President Coolidge. Subsequently, President Hoover insisted he head the Tariff Commission.

Difficult as were the Chinese and Mexican problems, Fletcher has said those he encountered in his first ambassadorial position impressed him most. Informed upon arrival at Santiago of ill feeling growing out of a 20-year-old argument between the United States and Chile over a small claim—the cause of which nobody seemed to know definitely—he averted trouble by his sense of humor.

Toured With Hoover.

He returned from Italy after four years in time "to vote," and accompanied President-elect Hoover on his good-will South American trip.

"I played the trite role of guide, philosopher and friend," Fletcher said.

He wanted to resign "to play more golf" upon returning to this country, but was immediately packed back to Italy until his successor was selected in June, 1929.

Fletcher was firmly decided upon a policy of golf, but his freedom from public chores lasted for only a year for he was drafted by Hoover to head the Tariff Commission.

When in Washington, Fletcher plays golf at exclusive Burning Tree, where women are forever barred, where the course is never congested, and where statesmen and politicians gather in privacy of the nineteenth hole to swap stories and strategies.

Hamilton Is Declared A Fighter in Kansas

Topeka, Kans., June 6 (AP).—John D. M. Hamilton, chosen general counsel for the Republican National committee today, is known in Kansas as a fighter and an organizer.

Drought Peril To U. S. Food Supply Grows

Famine Unlikely, Although Shortage Threatens; Relief Speeded.

By Leon Dure, Jr.

The Nation's drought yesterday continued its record-breaking blight, relieved only by scattered local showers that served more to whet the West's vast thirst for water than to bring life back to shriveled crops.

From the Department of Agriculture, obviously alarmed over a weather phenomenon that President Roosevelt recognizes is now rapidly approaching the proportions of a National calamity, came a warning that the unprecedented dry spell will "materially affect the National food supply."

That this does not mean any danger of human famine, both the President and agriculture officials were at pains to emphasize. But it does mean that millions of live stock are facing acute famine for want of foodstuffs—the lack of which will profoundly upset the normal farm production.

Area Is Spreading.

Each day the red blotch on maps behind the President's desk is spreading out, showing more counties have become emergency areas in which crops are all but ruined. Gradually the red is replacing an even larger splash of blue, which denotes those counties in which conditions are serious but might be relieved by rain.

To meet this situation, the President will ask Congress for more than $500,000,000—probably $525,000,000—with which to bring hope back to the hundreds of thousands of farm families. To do this, he has tossed his carefully prepared budget with its hope of a balanced ledger in 1936, out of the window.

Although the ever-ready millions of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation were available for transfer to relief agencies, the President chose to upset his budget by asking a half-billion appropriation for the direct purpose of alleviating the drought as the franker and more honest course.

To Boost Wheat Payments.

This was explained at the White House coincident with the President's belief that the drought is a worse disaster than a major conflagration, which at least leaves work to be done after its devastation. The necessity of the Government taking charge, with thousands unable to sustain themselves until next year, he regards as fundamental.

If the budget is not balanced after the next fiscal year, in accordance with the President's expressed intentions, he feels it should be properly chargeable to an unforeseeable National calamity. The prospect remained, however, that not all of the $500,000,000 or more—which will throw the budget out of kilter by just that amount—need be spent.

Only slightly encouraging word from the Weather Bureau, which reported slim improvement in some regions, was followed yesterday by an announcement by the Farm Administration that wheat benefit payments to farmers will be increased 1 cent. This will add $3,500,000 to the approximately $30,000,000 now being rushed into the West.

Wheat growers have received 20 cents a bushel for the grain they promised not to plant and were to get 8 cents more until the AAA upped the amount to 9. In addition to this means of farm rescue, the AAA disclosed the Interstate Commerce Commission has authorized substantial reductions on farm shipments within the drought area.

Light Rain Reported.

As the arid blight, engulfing while States, continued its eastward and southward movement, J. B. Kincer, the Weother Bureau's chief of crop forecasts, announced that light showers had helped the Ohio Valley and parts of western Iowa and Nebraska during the last 24 hours.

Similar showers may be expected today in the Dakotas, parts of Minnesota, Nebraska, Kansas, Missouri, the lower Ohio Valley and Kentucky. But "no rain is indicated for the other grain sections, nor for western New York" and "Texas also is rapidly becoming dry." These two States mark the Eastern and Southern extremities of the drought, now covering all but a fourth of the Nation.

Most significant of the flurry of announcements on the drought was a survey by the Department of Agriculture, the most comprehensive report yet issued. It set out that conditions of pastures and early crops as a whole are "so much below any previous records" that comparisons are difficult and forecasts dangerous.

To Affect Dairy Prices.

As an instance of how far-reaching are the effects of the drought, it declared "the scarcity and high price of grain will tend to decrease the number of chickens raised and the number of egg produced. The short crop expected, the exceedingly poor pastures, and higher prices of grains, tend to reduce dairy production."

Thus, while the most serious results of the drought are the unrivalled shortages of hay and forage, together with starvation of livestock, its results will be felt by city consumers throughout the Nation. Continuing, the agricultural report declares concerning livestock:

"Death losses are mounting steadily, and, considering the large area that is in difficulty, heavy death losses, during the next few weeks at least, can hardly be avoided even should there be a normal total rainfall during the remainder of the season. * * * The final outcome for this season depends largely on how soon the drought is broken."

Relief Work Rushed.

More than 200 inspectors of the Bureau of Animal Husbandry are in the field now appraising and classifying cattle in 160 emergency drought counties in 9 States as part of the huge cattle-buying operation. Meat products will be distributed by the Emergency Relief Administration, which yesterday asked for more bids on processing cattle and grass seed.

In addition, Harry L. Hopkins, relief administrator, announced emergency relief funds totaling $5,986,202 to four States, one of which, Wisconsin, in the drought area, got $3,685,137. These grants are for general relief, which the administrator plans to dispense by providing paying jobs, as under the CKA, rather than by outlays of feed and seed.

Both Hopkins and Chester C. Davis, AAA administrator, conferred with Representatives from drought States at the Capitol. The former said the Relief Administration would be caring for 300,000 families by the end of the week and that more than 1,000,000 are receiving Government help because of the drought.

The Republicans' Creed

"Declaration of Policy" Assails Bureaucratic Rule, Inflation and Reckless Spending and Says People Must Choose Democracy or Dictatorship.

Chicago, June 6 (AP).—The text of the Republican National Committee's new "declaration of policy" follows:

American institutions and American civilization are in greater danger today than at any time since the foundation of the republic.

The people must determine whether we are to remain a democracy or to substitute the domination of an all-powerful central government.

While it is not within the authority of the Republican National committee to write a detailed party program, under existing circumstances we deem it our duty to set forth the spirit and attitude in which our party should approach the problems of the day, and to restate our principles of Government.

Our Nation is beset with problems of infinite complexity—the problems of recovery; of unemployment with its unending tale of human suffering; of agriculture with its lost markets and relatively low prices; of forever checking abuses and excesses that have become all too apparent, and thereafter the problems of a wider spread of prosperity, of relieving the hardships of unemployment and old age, and of avoiding these tragic depressions.

Councils Liberal Spirit.

These problems must be approached in a broad, liberal and progressive spirit, unhampered by dead formulas or too obstinately clinging to the past.

Our country has been backward in legislation dealing with social questions. We welcome the recognition that these questions demand attention by Government.

But we insist that all of these problems can best be solved within the framework of American institutions in accordance with the spirit and principles of the founders of the Republic, without the destruction of individual freedom.

In the name of National recovery, the present Administration has committed the country to a program which unless checked will lead to the chaos of unlimited inflation. The slowly accumulated savings and the present earnings of the people are being consumed recklessly by the Government. At the very threshold of life, the youth of the Nation is being saddled with unbearable burdens.

"Covert" Action Assailed.

A small group in Washington, vested with temporary authority, is seeking covertly to alter the framework of American institutions. They seek to expand to the utmost limit the powers of the central Government. In place of individual initiative they seek to substitute complete Government control of all agricultural production, of all business activity.

There is nothing new in most of the present political and economic experiments. History records a long record of failure of similar experiments. As often in the past, the people least able to bear the burden will be the chief sufferers from the mistakes of misguided bureaucrats, who ignore history.

Progress, liberty and democracy go hand in hand. Even if by tyranny, Government could assume material well being—which it can not—it is too heavy a price to pay.

Given liberty of expression and of action, the people are better able to find a solution of their problems than any group of autocrats.

We must not see destroyed in four years a civilization which has been centuries in building and which has brought to our Nation, greater progress, well being and happiness than have ever been enjoyed by any nation, any time, anywhere.

No More Repudiation.

In the interest of the reestablishment of faith in our Government, we insist that there shall be no further repudiation of solemn obligations of the Government.

We believe that governments and men who can not stand criticism are those most in need of it and that only through deliberate discussion can we reach sound conclusions.

We believe in freedom of speech and in freedom of the press, and in freedom of the radio for the discussion of National questions.

We believe in an economic system based upon individual initiative, and the maintenance of competition, checked by Government regulation—not in an economic system based upon bureaucratic control and bureaucratic management.

We are opposed to revolutionary change without popular mandate—and all "change by usurpation * * * the customary weapon by which free governments are destroyed."

We believe that the present emergency laws vesting dictatorial powers in the President must never be permitted to become a permanent part of our Government system.

Backs Federal System.

We believe in our Federal form of Government with its system of State and local responsibilities.

"We believe that we can not spend our way to prosperity.

"We believe that an unassailable National credit and a balanced budget are indispensable foundations of National well being.

"We believe, in short, that American democracy, working along American lines, in accordance with the spirit and principles of American institutions is equal to the task of solving the problems of the new world, of breaking down the obstacles that stand in our way, and of resuming at an even more rapid pace the progress that has characterized the life of the Nation for well nigh 150 years.

"We call upon all who believe in the maintenance of these principles to unite in the election of Senators and Representatives who will support them."

Bonds and Notes Issue to Smash Debt Records.

The Government's offering of $800,000,000 in bonds and notes has been oversubscribed eight times more than eight times to make the best Treasury financing showing since before the 1933 bank holiday, the Associated Press reports.

Exact figures were not available, but the Treasury said yesterday demand for its 3 per cent June 15 bonds was eight times the $300,000,000 offer, while $500,000,000 in 2⅛ per cent five-year notes was oversubscribed nine times.

The result was approximately $7,000,000,000 of cash demand for $800,000,000 of cash demand for $800,000,000 in Government paper before the books on cash subscriptions closed Tuesday night. The fact that the new borrowing will push the public debt beyond the $26,596,000,000 war peak apparently had no effect on the financial market.

Gasoline Prices Slump As Mayor Turns Seller

Trenton, Tenn., June 6 (AP).—Mayor W. D. Landrum, who went to war when he couldn't do anything else about the high price of gasoline in Trenton, had won today at every turn.

With the approval of the city council, Landrum borrowed $64 from the municipal treasury, borrowed an unused filling station from a friend, and in less than a week the price of gas slid down from 23 to 18 cents a gallon.

Harriman Testifies About Book Entries

New York, June 6 (AP).—Joseph W. Harriman today declared in Federal court that he had nothing to do with the 14 false entries the Government charges he caused to be made in the books of the Harriman National Bank & Trust Co.

He testified that he personally did not concern himself with the system of bookkeeping used in his bank, but that he left all such matters to subordinates.

Abductor Convicted In District Court

Accused of abducting David Tosh Burgh and taking him into Maryland, where he was stripped of his outer clothing and trussed to a tree, John Donohue, of Baltimore, was found guilty yesterday in the District Supreme Court. A companion, George Murphy, entered a plea of guilty June 1.

Murphy and Donohue were indicted for joy-riding, assault with the intent to commit robbery and abduction. Neither has been sentenced pending an investigation of their past records.

Another customer, V. A. Clements, was forced to accompany the bandits 2 miles from town, where he was released.

U. S. Operatives Hear Details Of Nazi Work

Dickstein Pounds Desk at Heated Committee Hearing.

pathisers are making use of anti-Semitic articles which appeared 7 year ago in Henry Ford's Dearborn Independent. Representative Weidman (Democrat), Michigan, produced a volume entitled "The International Jew," which bore Ford's name as author. The book conssited of reprints of the editorials generally attributed to the automobile manufacturer.

Producing letters and telegrams from Detroit, Weideman got into the record a denial of Ford's authorship of "The International Jew" and the fact that as long ago as November, 1927, Ford had written to German publishers forbidding them to reproduce the articles.

For most of the day, the hearing dragged, with questioning and requestioning on issues remote from the main issue—whether the German government is carrying on subversive propaganda in this country.

Things livened up for a moment when two young men, leaving the caucus room, turned at the doorway and gave Dickstein a derisive "Heil Hitler" salute.

Officer Called.

Bristling with fury, the stocky little New Yorker leaped to his feet and yelled for an officer to overtake the men and bring them back.

"They're Nazi spies!" cried Dickstein. "Get them, officer!"

But by the time the officer had roused from a doze, the "spies" were far away.

Later in the day, enraged by the placidness of Walter Kappe, editor of a German newspaper in New York, Dickstein hammered the table and exclaimed against "alien spies."

Dickstein had been pressing the witness about what would constitute slander of the Nazi government, Kappe having explained it was the purpose of the "Friends of New Germany" to combat such slander.

The witness agreed it would not be slander to say Hitler had gagged the German press and taken over German industries, but when Dickstein continued to demand to be told what shouldn't be said, Kappe retorted:

"When you, Mr. Dickstein, start talking about 'Hitler bandits' and 'Hitler murderers'——"

Kappe got no further, for Dickstein flew into a rage, and an intra-committee dispute ensued which Chairman McCormack finally settled by taking over the witness himself.

Views Are Changed.

In response to McCormack's soft questions, the witness admitted he had changed his views recently and now realized that subversive alien propaganda should not be condoned. The chairman's persuasiveness had Kappe's eyes misty before his lecture on the evils of fomenting racial antagonism was over, but Dickstein's erect back still quivered indignantly.

The activity of German consuls at Chicago and St. Louis in assisting the work of the "Friend of New Germany," subject of the committee's inquiry, was revealed by correspondence inrtoduced into the record, and was denounced by former Senator Tom Hardwick, the committee's counsel.

Hardwick declared the correspondence showed the German government, through its representatives, had been "organizing, strengthening and extending the Friends of New Germany, although the Hitler government has appeared to dissociate itself from this supposedly purely American organization."

Acts Questioned.

"I questioned the propriety of these acts by officials of a foreign government," said the attorney.

Only two other witneses were heard, the leader and former leader of the "Friends of New Germany." But the worst that Reinhold Walter, present head of the organization, had done was to receive propaganda films from Germany through the embassy and consulate general of that nation, while Fritz Gissible, on the stand for more than three hours, emerged as the first man to raise the Swastika flag in the United States. He hauled it to the masthead one night above the German-American Building at the Chicago Century of Progress Exposition.

In this connection, Attorney Hardwick will be a happy man when he has struggled through his last pronunciation of swastika.

Landis Slated No. 1 Wall Street Tamer

In 1924, is a protege of Prof. Felix Frankfurter, famed Harvard liberal whose "bright young men" have had a major part in drafting New Deal legislation.

He Put Teeth in Act.

Landis, just 34, wrote most of the securities act of 1933. His Wall street enemies conceded it was the most air-tight financial law ever passed. He helped keep the teeth of the stock market act sharp during its long journey through Congress.

The President's signature ended a struggle of many years for legislation designed to curb speculation and protect investors.

It had its inception when thousands saw their savings swept away in the 1929 collapse of Wall street's paper profits. Mr. Roosevelt pushed the campaign along with his inauguration declaration that "there must be an end to speculation with other people's money." Senate investigators supplied the last driving force when they wrung from J. P. Morgan and other financiers and traders the story of secret "bargain" stock lists, huge commissions and manipulative pools.

The new law was fought tooth and nail by the exchanges. Congressmen charged they had organized the most powerful lobby in history. The exchanges protested they favored "sound" Federal regulation, but argued the law represented unwarranted intrusion in private affairs.

Provisions of Act.

Highlights of the new act:

All exchanges must register with the commission and abide by its rules on penalty of $500,000 fine.

Margins and brokers' credit to be regulated by the commission and the Federal Reserve Board.

Manipulation by fictitious sales, dissemination of false information and other practices barred, on penalty of $10,000 fine or two years' imprisonment.

All corporations with stocks listed on exchanges must submit detailed reports to the commission. All trading of officers and major stockholders in issues of their own company must be disclosed to other stockholders.

Investors who show they suffered losses because of violation of any part of the law may collect damages.

Ladies, Gentlemen Banned by Rainey In House Talks

The question of whether a Represetnative ought to say "Ladies and gentlemen" when starting a speech in the House came up for an official ruling yesterday.

Representative Robert Luce (Republican), Massachusetts, propounded a parliamentary inquiry to Speaker Henry T. Rainey on the subject.

Rainey, whose duties include tips on etiquette, advice to the lovelorn and, similar knotty problems, went into conference with himself.

"It is enough to say 'Mr. Speaker' at the beginning of an address," he ruled. "'Ladies and gentlemen' is below the dignity of the House of Representatives."

Church Financial Plan Is Success

The effectiveness of the plan is revealed in figures of the Belmont Church here, of which Mr. Whiteley is pastor. Last September the church had a deficit of $2,600 and collections were consistently falling below budget estimates. Less than eight months after the plan was put into operation the deficit was wiped out and the budget for 1934-1935 was oversubscribed by $2,000.

Competition was keen today between hunters from the stables of Dr. L. M. Allen, of Winchester; Mrs. J. H. Whitney, of Upperville, and E. L. Redmond, of Middleburg, with horses from these owners taking a number of first, second and third ribbons.

Virginia Liquor Sales Assailed By Methodists

Local Option Principle Is Nullified by Mail Order System, Claim.

Richmond, June 6 (Spl.).—Two blasts against Virginia's alcoholic beverage control system came out of two Methodist gatherings in Virginia today, with Dr. Fred R. Chenault declaring at Halifax that the A. B. C. board's mail-order system is a violation of the local option principle, and the Rev. W. S. Deyerle charging here that "liquor interests are fast getting control of the State."

Meanwhile, reports were current that the A. B. C. board planned to permit formation of hotel clubs, so that "members" could be served cocktails and other drinks from their lockers.

The board also issued a regulation today to permit both on and off sale premises sale of wine and beer, designed, it was believed, to keep licensees from violating the law where they are unable to prevent a customer buying a drink from a bottle and then walking off with the bottle.

The board also ruled all beer of 3.2 per cent alcoholic content must be so labeled, otherwise it will be considered strong beer and under control of the State. This regulation will prohibit sales of brews at ball parks, unless the beer is plainly marked.

Chenault Blames Board.

Dr. Chenault, former Richmonder, holds a Danville pastorate and is head of both the Virginia committee and the Danville committee on temperance and social service. He said that the Democratic party and the people have declared for local option but that "the Alcoholic Control Board of Virginia is still in its swaddling clothes and forthwith makes negative this principle. His attack was made at the Danville district conference at Halifax.

Dr. Deyerle, pastor of the Highland Park Methodist Church here, and head of the Richmond district committee on temperance and social service, embodied his charges in his report to the district conference in session at his church today.

The Deyerle report said that "instead of removing temptations from office holders, temptations to accept bribes have been multiplied; instead of giving employment, only a few have been given jobs; instead of helping business, thousands of dollars are being withheld from legal business and spent on liquor; instead of balancing the budget of State and Nation, it is being thrown farther off balance by calls to make provisions for the criminals, insane and dependents the restoration of legal alcohol will make.

Mail Orders Assailed.

Dr. Chenault's report said that "when we voted on October 3, last, we were not voting for high-powered beer and wine to be sold at every soda fountain, restaurant and filling station, but the people were voting whether they should have prohibition as then recognized under the eighteenth amendment or a form of liquor control as expressed in some dispensary system.

"It must be remembered that the Democratic party embodied distinctly the principle of local option, saying every community had a right to indicate its choice in this matter, but now the alcoholic board of control has said any community may order by mail liquor from the stores in Richmond or anywhere else they may be located.

Purchases Near $1,000,000.

The alcoholic beverage control board announced that to date it has purchased $793,314.95 worth of hard liquors and $103,830.90 worth of wines, for a total of $897,145.85 outlay, according to the Associated Press.

An analysis of the total number of bottles of liquor and wines sold in State stores in Richmond from May 15 to May 30, inclusive, showed 117,911 bottles sold. For such liquors and wines, the board received approximately $106,000.

Only 3,274 of the sales were for wine, or less than 3 per cent. Whisky sales totaled 84,768 bottles, or 73.94 per cent of all hard liquors. Gin sales totaled 28,656 bottles, or 24.99 per cent; brandy, 440 bottles, or 0.38 per cent; rum, 68 bottles, or 0.06 per cent; cocktails, 428 bottles, or 0.37 per cent, and cordials, 277 bottles, or 0.24 per cent.

Frederick Plans Highway Society

Stimulation of Traffic on No. 40 Is Goal.

Frederick, Md., June 6 (Spl.).—Formation of a permanent organization to support use of the National highway, a movement now under way from coast to coast, will be discussed at a meeting here tomorrow night, sponsored by the chamber of commerce. Dr. William Blake Hindman, Uniontown, Pa., president of the National Highway, Inc., will make an address.

The highway, U. S. Route No. 40, is the only East-West highway through Maryland and is considered one of the finest roads from coast-to-coast. Extending from Atlantic City, N. J., to San Francisco, Calif., it is classed as the longest stretch of improved highway in the world. One of the aims of the organization is to carry on constantly a program for the physical improvement of the highway where such improvement is needed.

Aware of the business and historic value of the route, other sections of the country are taking part in the unified support in it. It was learned yesterday that the chambers of commerce at Atlantic City, Columbus and St. Louis are backing the same plan in which this city is interested. From a local viewpoint traffic this year is 15 per cent ahead of last year over the National pike. This route is used extensively by tourists from the West going to Washington.

Definite News On Radcliffe Stand Awaited

Backers Expecting Word Sunday on Maryland Governorship Race.

Baltimore, June 6 (Spl.).—Backers of the boom to name George L. Radcliffe, regional director of public works, as compromise candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor of Maryland, today said that they expect a definite decision by Sunday on whether Mr. Radcliffe will be a candidate.

So far Mr. Radcliffe has not indicated whether he will enter the primary campaign, in which Gov. Ritchie, Mayor Howard W. Jackson of Baltimore and Dr. Charles H. Conley, of Frederick are entered.

The Radcliffe forces indicated that their three major objectives are: Withdrawal of Gov. Ritchie from the fifth-term race and entry into the senatorial race; indorsement by Mayor Jackson of the Radcliffe candidacy; winning over of the State's Attorney Herbert R. O'Conor so that he will run on the Radcliffe ticket for the attorney generalship.

If any one of these three aims could be accomplished the political deadlock in Maryland in a measure would be broken, the Radcliffe forces believe. Those back of Mr. Radcliffe—Senator Millard E. Tydings, Gilbert A. Dailey, collector of customs at Baltimore, and former People's Counsel Clarence W. Miles—admit, however, that they are not overly optimistic that either Jackson or Ritchie will quit the race.

If Mr. O'Conor can be persuaded to run on the Radcliffe ticket, it is believed Mr. Radcliffe would enter the race. Mr. O'Conor is popular in Baltimore, and each of the political factions has been angling for him to line up with its side.

Sun-Back Dresses Barred for School Girls in Baltimore

Baltimore, Md., June 6 (Spl.).—Sun-back dresses may be all right in the home, or even on the street, but they have no place in school.

That ruling was made today by Miss Achsah E. Gibson, principal of the Garrison Junior High School, when she noticed two young girl students wearing the cool, backbone revealing costumes.

Miss Gibson found the girls were about 14 years old. She further found that the dresses offered an almost irresistible temptation to small boys to drop things down the girls' backs.

So Miss Gibson ordered the girls to do something about their garb. One donned a jacket, while the other received permission to go home and change her dress.

The city school board backed up Miss Gibson in her ruling.

Virginia Bluefishing Opens With Big Catches Reported

Word of the Best Sport in Years Comes From Wachapreague.

Richmond, June 6 (Spl.).—The bluefishing season has opened in Virginia with a vengence, with fishermen on the Atlantic seacoast and in Chesapeake Bay reporting hand line catches of large numbers of blues, averaging 4 pounds in weight. Wachapreague, one of the greatest fishing resorts in Virginia, sent six parties to the fishing grounds one day last week and reported the best sport in years.

Not only were quantities of fine blues caught, but the party guided by Eugene Jester brought in 34 trout ranging in size from 2½ to 5 pounds. Sam Taylor's party brought in 45 trout, some of which weighed 7 pounds. A report from Quinby, Va., stated that parties there said that the fishing this year is the best in the last eight years. One guest of Capt. L. S. Corbin brought in a trout weighing 12 pounds.

From Wachapreague comes the report that the first channel bass of the season have arrived. William Colona brought in two of about 50 pounds each. A. H. G. Mears, of Wachapreague, caught 41 blue fish on the first trip of the season, ten of them weighing 41 pounds.

At Messick, near Newport News, one party brought in 71 blue fish, averaging 3 pounds each. The net fisherman who fish for commercial houses report that the blues are running strong and that there are many of them to be had in Virginia waters at the present time.

At Deltaville the blue fish are running strong in the nets, but the fishermen have not started to go after them with hand lines as yet. Croakers are running to 3 pounds in weight and are biting ravenously. Trout are also beginning to run in the Virginia waters, according to the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce.

Tax Receipts Up in Virginia

Internal Revenues May Set New Record for Year.

Richmond, June 6 (Spl.).—Internal revenue receipts in Virginia for May were 52 per cent greater than those of the same month two years ago, Collector N. B. Early, jr., announced today, and exceeded those of last year by $120,000.

While the fiscal year has a full month to run, the collections already have exceeded those of the previous fiscal year, and unless an unexpected slump should occur in June, a new all-time record will be established when the books close on June 30.

The May collections amounted to $11,822,931, compared with $11,702,906 in May, 1933, and $7,728,650 in May 1932.

The processing tax accounted for the increase over last May as stamp and income taxes were lower. Miscellaneous taxes also were higher this May and there was a small amount received from distilled spirits.

The collections for 1934 and 1933, by classes, were as follows:

Stamps, $10,096,179, against $10,653,727; income, $745,462, against $902,561; miscellaneous, $196,103, against $146,607; processing, $783,800, against none, and distilled spirits, $1,296, against none.

At least two inspectors who long had been with the service had looked forward to promotion, and it was said that several connected with the Baltimore office had hoped they might get the position.

Mr. Carlson, if he is confirmed by the Senate, will succeed A. O. Calcott, retired because of age.

Mr. Carlson is regarded as being well qualified to fill the position, holding a certificate as chief engineer on any ocean, bay or river in the United States. He was engineer of the city's fireboat Vulcan until that craft was put out of commission several months ago.

Man, 30, Faces Trial in Boy's Cane Slaying

Confession Is Claimed at Philippi, W. Va., Liquor Quarrel Blamed.

Philippi, W. Va., June 6 (Spl.).—Forest B. Poling, Barbour County prosecuting attorney, today said a first-degree murder warrant would be issued against Lawrence Carroll, 30, of Moatsville, who early today, State police said, confessed to the slaying of Dale Janes, 15, a neighbor boy, whose body was found in a cave near there Sunday.

Poling said Carroll had made a confession to State troopers, and quoted him as saying that he and Dale went to a nearby hill to "get a drink," and that he urged Dale to go to his grandmother's and "steal some wine." An argument followed, the reputed confession stated, and Carroll then stated:

"He called me a liar, and I swung at him and he fell and hit his head on a rock. I went down to a spring and wet my handkerchief and tried to revive him, and when I found I couldn't, I went home to bed.

"I couldn't sleep. At daylight I went out and picked up the body and carried it to a rocky place and put it in a crevice."

While Carroll's reported confession apparently exonerates Gordon Blake, 37, former convict, of Clemtown, who was taken into custody for questioning, he will remain in the Barbour County jail for the present. He previously had been under bond of $1,000 on a charge of attempting to beat to death his 88-year-old grandmother, Mrs. Adline Blake, when she refused to give him money, and also on a charge of jail-breaking. When taken into custody in the Janes case, his bondsmen surrendered him.

Blake, Carroll and the Janes boy were all seen near the old Moatsville Church about 7 p. m. on the day the boy was slain. All three left the church and crossed a small bridge a short distance from the cave in which Dale was found dead, buried head first under a pile of rocks in a small top opening, supposedly while still living.

Maryland Gets June Aid Fund Of $1,600,000

Ritchie Calls Business Men to Confer Friday on Relief Program.

A June relief grant of $1,600,000 for Maryland was announced yesterday by the Federal Emergency Relief Administration.

The fund is to be divided as follows: For general relief and work program, $1,349,449; for transient relief, $96,541; National Reemployment Service expenses, $7,932; student aid, $5,958; relief research, $7,435; for needy fishermen, $50,000; for materials for the Civil Works Administration armory project in Baltimore, $80,000, and for completion of the public works of art project, $2,635.

Ritchie Calls Meeting On State Relief Plans

Baltimore, June 6 (Spl.).—Gov. Ritchie today announced that the plans to confer with a large group of Maryland businessmen and welfare leaders next Friday at Annapolis on the best means of meeting the State relief problem.

Originally, the Governor had invited only three officials to meet with him. They are Mayor Howard W. Jackson of Baltimore, Walter N. Kirkman, State purchasing agent, and Harry Greenstein, Maryland relief administrator.

Widespread interest led the Governor today to announce the enlargement of the group.

A committee will be named to determine how relief costs in the State can be reduced, and how funds can be raised to meet expenses of administering such relief.

The cost of Maryland relief during the next 12 months has been set at $18,000,000 by Harry L. Hopkins, National relief administrator. Of that sum, Maryland would be required to raise half. Gov. Ritchie wishes to cut the total amount down so the State will not have to supply $9,000,000.

Gasoline Men Close Stations

Berkeley Springs Group Asks Adjustment So They Can Compete.

Berkeley Springs, W. Va., June 6 (Spl.).—Motorists caught here without gas today found themselves without a filling station supply as a result of a unanimous agreement of the operators to "strike" until the wholesale gasoline firms made adjustments by which the local dealers could compete with Hancock, Md., filling stations, 6 miles distant.

For some time Hancock stations have been selling gas for 15 cents per gallon. In West Virginia the price has been nearly a nickel higher—19 cents, plus tax. The Hancock dealers were selling below the actual cost to the Berkeley Springs dearers, it was stated. Efforts to iron out this trouble have been made in one way or another, without success.

The "strike" finally loomed as the only method to appeal to the wholesale distributors, and this morning every filling station in town closed up tight against gasoline sales.

Spoils System End Is Urged

Inroads on U. S. Service Hit in Article by Steward.

Condemnation of the spoils system and "its inroads on the Federal service" is voiced in an article in the current issue of the Federal Employe, official magazine of the National Federation of Federal Employes, by Luther C. Steward, president of the organization.

"Neither all administrators in Washington and elsewhere throughout the Nation, nor scores of legislators have given any evidence of their acceptance of the merit system as opposed to the spoils system," states Steward.

"The need for legislative action which will remove virtually all Federal positions from the grasp of the spoilsmen and place them under civil service never has been plainer than it is today."

DURING the month of June, the one fish that will be caught on this side of the Chesapeake Bay is the large hardhead or croaker. On the Eastern Shore, at Tangier Island, in Tangier Sound and down as far as the Capes, trout, hogfish, kingfish, perch, flounders, bluefish and the large black drum can be caught after June 15.

The latter part of June bluefish will come into the Middle Ground, about 12 miles east of Point Lookout, in the middle of the bay. At this point the bottom of the bay rises from a depth of about 100 feet to within from 35 to 12 feet of the surface for a distance of about 8 miles in length and several miles in width.

The northern extremity of "the Middles" is marked by a black buoy, and is known as "Northwest Middles." The southern extremity is known as "Southwest Middles." The entire section is known to the Government as Kedges Straits Middle Ground, and to the fishing captains of the bay as "the Middles."

Look for Black Buoy.

Bluefish, trout and the largest croakers inhabit the region about the black buoy known as "Northwest Middles." Northeast of the buoy, and on a straight line with it up the bay, is the famous "deep hole," discovered by the writer and Capt. Brady McKay late in July, 1929.

Millions of sand-toads (blow fish) swarm around the fishing boat like knats in Southwest Middles. And small "black wills," some times called "black sea bass," are caught by the thousands in this section, later in the summer.

Southwest Middles may prove to be a good chumming ground late this summer or starting early in the fall. Bluefish will abound therein and alewives are plentiful just now. Alewives are ground up and used for bait in chumming. And in this section, S. W. Middles, the wild, beautiful and gamest of all fish, the bonito (Boston mackerel) was landed last summer, ranging in weight from 10 to 30 pounds.

Caughto Trolling, Chumming.

Bonitos are caught trolling and Chumming. And the bluefish in Southwest Middles are caught chumming and trolling. At Northwest Middles the largest bluefish, trout and croakers can be caught still-fishing a little later in the season.

The best fishing fields of the bay are the most difficult to reach: Bloody Point, Sharps Island, Hooper Island, Deal Island, Tangier Sound and the Middles. These places are all across the bay; that is, on the other side of the channel.

Fishermen bent on reaching these grounds should first plan their trips with several things in mind. Boat captains charge more for making these long, hazardous trips across the bay. If you intend to chum or troll you should first consult your captain as to the wisdom of such a move. Off-hand I would say lay aside your chumming and trolling ambitions until July 15 or later. June and July are still fishing months.

Trout will not take bait until about July 1. The small spots will be with us at that time or a little later, and the trout and bluefish always follow the spots into the bay.

June Large Croaker Month.

June is the large croaker month, and we ought to make the best of it. The smaller, pan-size croakers will rush in about July 15. At that time the larger croakers will be caught only at the regular feeding grounds in deep water. Last summer these grounds were The Gooses, near Hooper Island, and off Point No Point.

If you intend to do any fishing this summer in Southwest Middles, blood worms, shrimp and peeler crabs should be taken along in large numbers, for they will fly like hot cakes the moment your hooks reach bottom. There are always a number of tormenters in every fishing ground, and the tormenters of Southwest Middles are sand toads and black wills. These tormenters are not at Northwest Middles.

Just now the best places to fish on this side of the bay are Brooms Island and Benedict on the Patuxent, and from Piney Point to Rock Point on the Potomac. And the fish that will be caught at these places are the large 2 and 3 pound croakers.

Opens About June 15.

Fishing does not open, generally, in the bay (on this side of the channel) until about June 15. Large croakers can be caught at the present time at Sharps Island, by which we mean below Tilghmans Island in a large body of water, which is nothing more than the mouth of the Greater Choptank River.

The big channel bass, which make their appearance early in May every year at Oregon Inlet, N. C., are now moving up the Atlantic Coast to Wachapreague, Chincoteague and Ocean City. They will start striking at these places about June 10 and keep it up until about July 10.

Moving Day Has Arrived For Calvert Street Span

Shuttle Busses to Take Care of Trolley Patrons.

The zero hour for the Calvert Street Bridge moving was 5 a. m. today. Then, jacks were to lift the 1,200 ton structure up so that rollers could be placed beneath it, and at about 7 a. m. was to start on its journey 80 feet southward.

Shortly after 1 a. m. today workmen began disconnecting the two ends of the structure. With the bridge thus loosened it was ready for the operations later.

Fourteen policemen will be on duty to keep back the crowds expected to witness the engineering feat. It will be 5 p. m. before the structure is at its new position.

Temporary abutments already have been built to connect the bridge in its new position. These will be put into place as soon as possible so that street car traffic can be resumed.

During the moving, shuttle busses will be operated to take care of the persons using the Chevy Chase trolley line. Power for hte actual moving of the structure will be furnished by five horses hitched to five windlasses.

Honor Unaffected.

The British have set forth their reasons for suspending war debt payments with a clarity that leaves no room for misunderstanding. Those who refuse to be persuaded of the inevitability of their "default" and the wisdom of it, under existing conditions, are impervious to reason.

But such critics might in decency recognize that successive British governments have made a most sincere and arduous effort to induce our Government to consider a revision of the debt settlements which would have permitted continued payments. Hoping against hope, they continued to make transfers long after receipts from their own debtors had been suspended. Moreover, "they have paid over to the United States Government all that they have received both from war debts and war reparations, and they have in addition paid nearly as much again out of their own resources."

The extent of British sacrifices, and the persistence and patience with which this debtor urged the irrefutable case for revision, testify to the reluctance behind the step which has been taken. A country whose wealth and power has been built upon a reputation for scrupulous observance of contractual obligations, does not lightly or willingly incur the reproach of being even technically in default.

The fact that London has resolved to suspend payments "until it becomes possible to discuss an ultimate settlement of international governmental war debts with a reasonable prospect of agreement" will be all but universally accepted in this country as evidence of the profound sincerity of the British position. It may also be taken as an indication that Great Britain does not fear that her decision will injure her high prestige either with fair-minded Americans, still less in the eyes of the rest of the world.

The Republican Chairman.

All things considered, Henry P. Fletcher is probably the best choice the Republicans could make at this time for chairman of the Republican National Committee. No man could have satisfied all of the divided and divergent elements of that party. While progressive or radical groups consider him too conservative, the preponderant opinion within the Republican party undoubtedly will be that the new chairman is exceptionally well-qualified for what is a hard and often thankless job.

He is no glad-hander or back-slapper. He is not a by-product of machine politics. He is a well-to-do Pennsylvanian who has spent 27 of his 61 years in diplomacy, where it may be assumed, he acquired tact and talents which should prove highly useful in reconciling the differences and evolving the policies of the Republican party.

As a Rough Rider in Theodore Roosevelt's time, as a career diplomat who served under both Republican and Democratic Presidents, as chairman of the Tariff Commission in the middle of the Hoover regime—a task he undertook as a public service—he has observed the political arena and known its chief combatants for more than a quarter of a century.

Rumors About The Mark.

For many weeks there have been rumors that Germany might devalue the mark. With the current sharp break in mark exchange the prospect of devaluation is again under discussion. The effect of such devaluation would not be as great as might be supposed, since Germany has only succeeded in maintaining the mark at its nominal gold parity by increasingly severe limitations upon dealings in so-called "free" marks. A bewildering variety of blocked marks, which can only be converted into foreign currencies at discounts ranging from 40 to 60 per cent, shows the hollowness of the pretension that Germany is still on a full value gold basis. It is evident that the present system of utilizing blocked marks, to cover part payments to exporters, provides an export stimulus comparable to that which would follow devaluation of the currency.

According to the latest Reichsbank report, gold holdings have fallen to a record low point of 130,000,000 RM, while the reserve ratio has declined to 3.7 per cent, notwithstanding the rigid restrictions imposed upon the exchanges, and in face of a partial moratorium upon private debt transfers. The moratorium may well be followed by complete suspension of transfers during the coming months. Consequently, mark devaluation or involuntary depreciation of the free mark currency seems inevitable.

The effect upon the outside world is not likely to be great, since the outcome has been more or less anticipated. The effect upon the Germans themselves, however, may well be serious. Open recognition of the fact that the mark is heavily depreciated will undoubtedly arouse deep misgivings among a people who still vividly remember the devastating effects of their post-war currency collapse.

A Constructive Step.

Senate approval of the reciprocal tariff bill marks the first constructive move which this Administration has made to revive foreign trade.

Heretofore, the policies adopted to further domestic recovery, such as systematic restrictions upon output, processing taxes, price-fixing agreements and manipulation of dollar-exchange values, have been so many new obstacles to an exchange of goods with other countries. For a time, indeed, it seemed as if those who urged National self-sufficiency as the goal of our recovery efforts might succeed in blocking efforts to expand our foreign trade by the only practicable method open to us. Congressional approval of the reciprocal tariff bill is, therefore, highly significant. It marks a definite reversal for the isolationist principles which were so widely indorsed a few months ago.

Official advocates of tariff reciprocity do not expect it to produce any sudden, or startling results. They do believe, however, that it will be possible gradually to relax hampering restrictions, which will lay the foundation for a subsequent expansion of our foreign trade. Obviously, initial overtures will have limited objectives, because a cautious and conservative approach is essential to prevent injury being done to domestic industries.

Fortunately for the purpose in hand, war debts and reparations may now be eliminated from consideration, but private indebtedness is still sufficient seriously to curtail the buying power of many countries. Moreover, inability to transfer sums due on debt account has resulted in restrictive exchange agreements and other limitations upon trading which will continue to interfere with normal activities. Hindrances of this sort will undoubtedly be encountered by our tariff negotiators at every turn, narrowing the scope and effectiveness of their proposals.

However, no progress toward restoration of an orderly system of international trade and finance will ever be achieved by pointing helplessly to the difficulty of the task. A beginning has to be made some time, somewhere. It seems logical to start by trying to expand the flow of goods. The stoppage of that flow has made debts uncollectible and caused currencies to depreciate. Consequently, it is rational to try to climb back through a stimulation of international trade.

To the extent that tariff bargaining succeeds in breaking down obstructive barriers, it will not only assist the revival of domestic industries but will also help to eliminate the obstacles to trade revival resulting from the excessive amount of international debt and the handicap of unstable currencies. Most important of all, passage of the tariff bill will signalize the advent of a more realistic method of approach to the vexed international questions that have been calling so long for statesmanlike handling by the present Administration.

Drought Relief.

Use of Federal funds for drought relief appears to be an absolute necessity. Congress took over the responsibility of supporting distressed human beings and feeding stock in drought areas several years ago. Today many farmers have become dependent upon the Government for almost everything they can not provide for themselves. Whether they are plagued by overproduction or no production at all, they look to Washington for aid.

Enactment of a drought relief bill, carrying $525,000,000, will be requested in a Presidential message. Congressmen are anxious to pass a special measure instead of leaving the problem to the discretion of the President under his broad powers to supply relief. It will furnish a good opportunity to manifest their devotion to the farmer on the eve of the Congressional campaigns. While political opportunism does not minimize the necessity of extending aid to the drought-stricken areas, it does accentuate the responsibility of leaders in both the House and Senate to guard against reckless appropriations without adequate safeguards.

The drought-relief program does not harmonize with the measure passed by the House to give the President blanket authority to spend RFC and PWA funds for relief. That measure was apparently designed to cover all contingencies. But Congress is going forward with a new bill for the drought areas. With the distressed farm belt thus being given special attention, there is no excuse whatever to authorize haphazard use of funds that have been specifically set aside for public works and loans to depression-ridden institutions.

Regardless of how the drought situation may be handled, it will be replete with ironies. It is proposed, for example, that Congress should provide $100,000,000 to buy feed for live stock. Under their crop-reduction contracts farmers were restricted in planting various forage crops. Recently the AAA lifted its prohibitions so as to "permit the planting and harvest of all forage crops, except corn and grain sorghums, and to permit pasturing these retired acres and harvesting hay for forage from them." Nevertheless, some farmers whose forage crops were curtailed by the AAA are now dependent upon funds from the Federal Treasury to buy feed for their stock.

Reports that the Nation is in danger of a food shortage because of the drought are emphatically denied. A heavy carryover of wheat from past years seems to give assurance of a surplus, even if the drought should continue. But the crop plans that were made in Washington a few months ago have been seriously disrupted. The very fact that a $525,000,000 relief appropriation for the agricultural belt is considered necessary, in addition to the special taxes levied upon the public for the farmer's benefit, suggests certain unforeseen limitations of "planned economy."

The District Loan Bill.

At the conclusion of an acrimonious debate on public works projects the House has voted by a substantial majority to accord the District of Columbia a privilege extended to the 48 States, Alaska, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands a year ago.

Even when this measure becomes law the rights of the District to borrow from the PWA will be narrowly restricted. A limit somewhere between the $10,750,000 authorized in the House bill and the $20,000,000 authorized by the Senate bill will be placed on such loans. And the money—if it is granted by the PWA—can be spent only for specified projects. No such restrictions were placed upon any other political unit, however insignificant.

Each of the four projects mentioned in the House bill is necessary to correct more or less notorious deficiencies in Washington's community service. Continued pollution of the Potomac River is a reproach to the District. Lack of an adequate tuberculosis hospital for adults is directly connected with the high local death rate from that disease. Rioting and unsatisfactory discipline at Lorton Reformatory has been traced to congestion and lack of adequate housing facilities there. Gallinger Hospital is seriously overcrowded. There seems no possibility of money being wasted on non-essential projects under this bill.

Moreover, Washington is in a better position to repay PWA loans than any other large American city. Happily enough, it has no municipal debt. Its finances are under strict control by Congress. That body could easily deduct the amount of the proposed loan from District revenues in annual installments if there were danger that it would otherwise remain unpaid.

In view of these facts, it seems curious that there should have been bitter opposition to granting such a limited privilege to the District. But a few Representatives have fallen into the habit of fighting every proposal for the benefit of Washington. Under the leadership of Representative Blanton, who, during the debate, was dubbed "the past master of the incompetent, immaterial and irrelevant," these reactionaries have defeated a number of important local bills in recent weeks. On Tuesday the House overrode their unreasonable attack. Entirely aside from the issue at stake there was pleasant reading in this rebuke to the prejudiced clique which seeks to dominate District affairs by filibustering and unfair tactics.

Doles For Votes.

A last-minute effort to revive the veterans' bonus bill has been checked by an unfavorable report from the Senate Finance Committee. In the opinion of a majority of the committee members the expenditure of something over $2,000,000,000 to discharge obligations that will not mature until 1945 would not be justifiable, even though it might give the bonusites a certain number of votes in November. Unless reason has run completely wild, the Senate will sustain this judgment.

Congress destroyed the economy act, over President Roosevelt's veto, a few months ago. An indefensible dole system for former soldiers was reestablished at heavy cost to taxpayers. The unbalanced budget was thrown into further confusion. Having thus succeeded in a major raid on the Treasury, even the veterans' lobby ought to sense the effrontery of the present drive to force currency inflation on the Government.

All of the campaigns for immediate conversion into cash of the endowment certificates granted to veterans by Congress have been devoid of logic. The lobby has relied upon political pull rather than sound argument to force its measures upon Congress. But this fresh movement to railroad the bonus bill through the Senate at the end of a busy session, just before the election campaigns begin, is an unusually crude attempt to exchange votes for doles and doles for votes.

Welcome, Stranger!

We deprecate the deprecatory tone wherewith a dispatch from Baltimore communicates that the sea-serpent has appeared in the Patapsco River. "It sounds," says the report, "like a whopping big fish story. . . . It was an enormous, snake-like creature with shiny, glistening skin, and had a head the size of a football." Sounds like a fish-story? It sounds exactly like all other sea-serpent descriptions.

Why shouldn't this reptilian wanderer visit American waters? And what American waters could better suit its obvious sociability than the estuaries of the Chesapeake? And, finally, why should Maryland, traditionally hospitable, receive the voyager with incredulity, when even dour Scotland met it with open arms as well as open mouths?

For our part, we extend a hearty welcome to this visiting stranger. It has probably come over to celebrate the Maryland tercentennial. It will perhaps stay to devour the Chesapeake's sea nettles. If so, a place should be found for the saurian on Maryland's coat of arms, provided room is available on that somewhat congested blazonry.

A Parade of the Past From the Files of The Post.

TWENTY YEARS AGO TODAY.

H. M. AYELSWORTH bought the town of Bulger, Colo., for $1 cash. He planned to plant oats on the main street and build a corral on the site of the Bulger Hotel. The town had been founded by Col. James Bulger, soldier of fortune, three years previously.

TEN YEARS AGO TODAY.

THE REICHSTAG expressed approval of Chancellor Marx's declaration on the Dawes report by a vote of 247 to 182. Communists, Nationalists and members of the Deutsch Voelkische party voted against it.

THE DISTRICT appropriation bill, carrying appropriations amounting to $26,455,105 and the new plan for a fixed contribution of $9,000,000 by the Federal Government, was passed by the Senate and was ready for approval at the White House.

Letters to the Editor

Fascism in America.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is my opinion that the United States is headed straight for fascism. The following events cause me to draw this conclusion:

First, Congress has shown its inability to deal with a National crisis and is now preparing to adjourn in the face of the worst series of strikes and labor disturbances that any country ever experienced. Dictatorial powers are lodged in the hands of one man, the President, who has no unified plan, but every now and then fixes up some temporary scheme as a makeshift. The House is too large and unwieldly to act in a sane and orderly manner.

Second, when 27 States are writhing in the midst of the worst drought this country has ever seen, the President was smilingly viewing the biggest Navy. All this militaristic display is a promise of the use of force to put down a social revolution. There may never be another Presidential election in the United States if civil and industrial strife increases.

Third, no labor legislation has been passed by this Congress.

Fourth, the NRA, AAA, and other schemes have proved their futility.

Fifth, the stock market is dull again.

Sixth, prices are rising faster than wages, which means distress to workers and white-collared toilers.

All of this points to the growth of fascism. THINKER.

Washington, June 5.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "Realist" was correct when he said the schools were dying of "intellectual dry rot." While an educational crisis exists over the entire country it is in the South where academic liberty suffers most. I have recently examined text books of Virginia public schools and found them not only out of date but containing statements regarding theories of economics and science that are absolute falsehoods. That a section of the country exists in such a state of barbarian intellect to make the Angelo Herndon and Scottsboro cases possible is an indication of how an obsolete educational system can assist in making an economic crisis more acute by allowing cheap politicans to use the class and racial prejudices of a people to build a political machine after the pattern of Herr Hitler's brown-shirted terror.

I hope The Post will not devote so much time and space to the European fascists that it will fail to write something about the growth of fascism in America. If it were a democracy neither "Realist" nor myself would hesitate to sign our names to letters. Instead, we bow before the intellectual dry rot of American fascism and hope we all meet on the barricades.

Appeal to the Women's Party.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: When will the women's party attack some of the inequalities under which women labor in the various Government departments? For instance, no matter how capable or efficient she may be, no woman in the Internal Revenue Bureau of the Treasury Department may aspire to any of the following places; head of a division, chief of an audit section, conferee, place on technical staff or reviewer of audit work. Of the numerous women attorneys in the bureau only two have attained the general counsel's office and then merely to subordinate posts.

Women are grossly discriminated against in all field offices. High officials have declared that no more women shall go to field offices as auditors or agents, and capable women already there have been fired or demoted in a number of instances.

History Repeats.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your paper has become so bookish of late, I venture to relate the following incident. Sitting idly on the porch, I picked up Carlyle's "Past and Present" and began turning the pages at random. My interest arrested, I read on and soon began to wonder if I were deep in a keen-witted editorial of today, or if the date were 1841, as the text indicated. There was money weakness, blindness, labor troubles and universal panaceas. I usually need a dictionary for Carlyle, but this, while pedantic, was lucid, and I stopped on a beautiful note, urging a return to "The Veracities and Integritories of Nature."

Science and Government

(From a speech by Owen D. Young, at the commencement exercises of the University of Nebraska.)

I know the failures of my time as well as its most biting critics, but I am not prepared to admit, what is so often charged, that my generation was bankrupt of accomplishment. What it hands to you is a country so well off in material things that you cannot bankrupt it by any experiment which you may make in your time. You may impair it, but you cannot altogether ruin it.

I would not say that it was an impossible task ultimately, but I do say that it will take more than one generation to destroy what we have built for you. Indeed, your problem is to deal with a land which is said to have too much rather than too little. That, at least, is a new condition in the history of the world.

No people before have suffered from too much. Yet that, we are told, is what has happened. So, however much you may chide us, however much you may criticize the results of the last five years, however severely you may indict us for failing wisely to administer, you must still give us credit for providing the plenty that ruined us. . . .

In the field of industry in the last generation we have not worn out anything. As fast as the new came on, the old was abandoned. It was physically good but economically worn out. And so by trial and error, by experiment after experiment, day after day, industry has taken from the physical sciences everything new which it could apply almost regardless of cost.

Has that been true in the social and political sciences? No, not at all. Laws were laws, banks were banks, society was society in its heights and depths, the untouchables of our time.

New ideas in that field were said to come from visionaries; experiments were revolutionary; and so we refused to take the lesson which was being demonstrated daily in the physical sciences, that visions after all were the motive power of progress and that experiments were the ratchets which held the advance. In the mechanisms of the social sciences, we knew little of that word obsolescence.

Research in the physical sciences for a generation has gone on daily. . . .

Our economic and political advance does not come about that way. It is periodic rather than constant. It comes only after a breakdown and amid confusion. Then for a short period we get intensified, indeed almost hot-headed, research. Impatiently we demand new applications by our social and political engineers. Great claims are made for new inventions. Great enthusiasm exists for new experiments, and if they fail, or what so often happens with inventions, if they do not match our fondest hopes, we are likely to despair or to revolt.

The President of the United States was faced on his entrance into office with the need for delayed research and experiment in the great field of social organization.

Why was it not logical to create a "brain trust" for research? That is what the physical sciences had been doing for a generation. No one there was afraid of a brain trust. . . .

I make one reservation, however. In the physical sciences we use the brain trust as research workers. We do not ask them to be application engineers. It is unfair to them. Application interferes with research, and the spirit of research interferes with practical application. If I had one suggestion for the Administration, appreciating as I do its difficulties and sympathizing as I do with its aims, it would be to separate sharply the field of research from application.

Let the brain trust develop the principles. Let the experienced engineers apply them in the creation of the new, practical working machines we need.

Perhaps we shall find our way not through militaristic regimentation and coercive police controls. Perhaps we shall have officially recognized research with responsible and responsive economic and social groups voluntarily applying it to their several needs under a general law, but not under bureaucratic administration.

Such a general law would prohibit and penalize unsocial or uneconomic practices and would make the industrial groups themselves responsible complainants against marauders and adventurers in industry who are enemies of the common good.

That strikes me as the principle by which to guard both our political and economic freedom. It it especially suited to a great democracy experienced in self-government. Other peoples less experienced may be compelled to adopt centralized oligarchic and coercive controls, but America is not yet ready to confess its incapacity to preserve its prosperity and its freedom under general laws.

If we have learned anything from the past, it is that we must not let this concurrent machinery of the physical and social sciences get out of balance.

We hear suggestions that the way to keep it in hand is to set the physical sciences back or retard their future growth. No. There is no hope in paralyzing the human mind or in failing to take advantage of the great resources of the unknown. That is still the most valuable material item on the balance sheet of humanity. You can not pay the debt which your generation owes to advance human welfare by failing to put in use your greatest asset. . . .

As my generation found its magic key in the physical sciences to unlock a world of plenty from our inheritance, so you will find your major task in the social sciences to control and apportion that world of plenty which is your inheritance. How much organized government must be enlarged, how much the free action of the individual must be curtailed, you will discover. Today we do not know.

Great demands are being made to reduce the spread between the leader and the laggard. You must find the way without impairing the verve of them who lead. A social order within a nation must strive not so much for unattainable equality as manageable equilibrium.

The Post Impressionist

Boudoir-Cap.

Postoffice, Thursday.

"I WOULDN'T convict my worst enemy on circumstantial evidence," said the Anglo-American. "And I'll tell you why.

"I'm a family man. What I like is the domestic hearth, and my idea of a happy evening is home, you know, with the lamp and slippers, a pipe and a jolly magazine, and the wife sittin' opposite and not interruptin'. My missus is American born. She's not entirely so quiet in her tastes as I am, and once in a way I feel I should give her somethin' a trifle more excitin' than my undivided company; that's why I asked her to meet me on the trip I'm tellin' you about. You see, I'm devoted to her, as you might say, I've never loved anybody else—simply never could. Not my fault—just the way I am. And yet . . .

"I'd been to Boston for my firm, and Kitten—that's the wife—was visitin' some bally cousin in Buffalo. So I toddled up to Montreal and wired Kitten to come on—told her to go straight to the Hotel Bonne Aventure, where I'd be puttin' up. I got there 24 hours in advance.

"Sweet little thing presidin' at the news-stand; demure's the word—big black eyes, French-Canadian roses in her cheeks. I thought I'd ask her were the New York papers in. She had a charmin' accent; said they'd be along in an hour, and she'd send 'em up if I'd leave my room-number. I was writin' it on one of my cards when somebody spoke to her more familiarly than I liked—and if it wasn't Dawson, our firm's local representative.

"'What's this?' he asked, and he shook his finger at me.

"I tried to tell him.

"'Not much!' he said. 'If your business in this town was business you'd have looked me up first-off.'

"I said it was just because I didn't want a wild time that I'd kept clear of him. But he dragged me off to the Dominion Club for dinner. We had some cocktails, and we'd drunk most of a bottle of champagne before we found it was corked and ordered another. Then in comes a messenger with my gloves and a note:

"'Dear Mr. Braithwaite: You left these at my news-stand. Fortunately I heard you say where you were going.—Jeanne Monnier.'

"I said: 'Now, wasn't that thoughtful?' Johnny said it was touchin'. We ordered a fresh bottle to drink the girl's health, and I realized she wasn't gettin' anything out of it all except good wishes, and Johnny said I'd be ungrateful if I didn't buy her a present.

"The only shop open was a lace shop. I asked the shop-assistant—not knowin' what's what in such things—could she pick a proper gift for a young lady, and she picked a boudoir cap, with lots of what she said was the newest shade of yellow ribbon stuck in and out of it. It cost as much as another quart. . . .

* * *

"Well, Miss Monnier'd gone off duty when I got back to the Bonne Aventure. So I left a card and the package at the desk and turned in.

"Her hours weren't very tryin': she was at lunch when I started for lunch at Johnny's club next day. He asked had I seen the shy violet, and I said she'd gone out. Then he said she was probably takin' the kiddies to their afternoon school.

"I asked: 'Is she by way of bein' a child's nurse in her spare time?'

"'No-o,' Johnny said. 'I mean her own children. Her husband's the Bonne Aventure night-clerk. Didn't think to mention it before because I knew your interest was entirely philanthropic.'

"That was surprisin'. But what was more surprisin' was that Johnny and I hung over luncheon till I looked at my watch and found out it was long after Kitten's train must have got in. . . .

"The clerk said she'd gone up to our room. Thinkin' she might be nappin' after her journey, and not wantin' to disturb her, I toddled over to the news-stand, where Mme. Jeanne'd reappeared, just to thank her in person for returnin' my gloves. She was the most grateful thing you ever saw. She said:

"'That so lovely present! You received my note of gratitude, Mr. Braithwaite? No? But I sent it up to your room quite 20 minutes ago!'

"I don't remember takin' the lift. I expect I flew up those stairs—and Kitten wasn't nappin'. . . .

"She held the note while I read it:

"'Dear, dear Mr. Braithwaite: Thank you a thousand times for that so charming boudoir-cap! Did you read my mind to know that it was exactly what I badly required? !! It makes me hope well that you will leave your gloves chez moi many times encore.

"'Jeanne Monnier.'"

"That's why," said he, "I wouldn't convict my worst enemy on circumstantial evidence!"

"And your wife," we were indiscreet enough to inquire, "divorced you on the ground of that note? Why," we tried to continue, "she——"

Shaking his head sadly, the Anglo-American interrupted:

"Worse. It was worse. Kitten didn't even suggest divorce proceedin's. She kept me—and she kept the note. I know the note by heart backwards. You see, she reads it to me—on occasions.

"No, old top, I wouldn't convict my worst enemy on circumstantial evidence."

Carlisle Bargeron

Oh, Here's Mrs. Diebenkorfer!

GOOD morning, ladies and gentlemen of the radio audience. This morning we again bring to you Mrs. Diebenkorfer, who will speak on "Our Government, Your Government and Mine." Mrs. Diebenkorfer:

BARGERON.

Good morning, my friends of the air. I come to you this morning again to tell you of the progress being made toward the more abundant life by our Government, your Government and mine. In our quiet, unassuming way we have been working for months on the chaos that has come to the umbrella industry. Manifestly here was one of the major keys to a healthy state for our people, that is to say the people who have the concern as never before of our Government, your Government and mine.

The vast amount of data available to us, some of which was left over by the previous Administration, but most of which we gathered ourselves, told us at the outset that the umbrella industry in this country had shrunken for several years.

• • • •

At first we thought, or perhaps I should say, the belief was entertained by some of us—that is to say, some of us who are engaged in the great work being done by our Government, your Government and mine—that it was the umbrellas themselves that had shrunken rather than the industry. But we experts never proceed on a half-baked premise. Once there appeard this division of thought we went back through out data and by probing here and probing there, by probing everywhere, so to speak, we were all finally able to come to a common ground from which we might proceed as a phalanx instead of a discordant group.

Having agreed that it was the industry itself that had shrunk it was plain, or at least it was plain to those of us who are trained in our Government, your Government and mine, that the thing to do was to revive the industry. How should we do this? Ah, there was the question that would have tried less hardier souls. It did, as a matter of fact, try us, but we proceeded nevertheless.

• • • •

We called upon Relief Administrator Hopkins to assign several CWA groups to wander around the streets aimlessly, but with their eyes always open for any observations that could help us to ascertain what had caused the shrinkage of the umbrella industry.

Some of you, not knowing the training which we of our Government, your Government and mine, receive, would say that the answer came by sheer stroke of Providence. Of course, it came through our tenacity of purpose.

One day a group of CWA workers while just walking around, with apparently not a thing in the world to do, got caught in a shower. To escape from it they stepped under an awning that hung from a cigar store. Other people came to stand with them until presently there was hardly a place to move under the awning.

• • • •

There was the answer to what had happened to the umbrella industry. Obviously if people stand under awnings hung from cigar stores during showers they will not buy umbrellas and if umbrellas are not bought then, our economists hold, the umbrella industry is bound to shrink.

With these inescapable facts before us, our course was clear. We had only to get a law prohibiting awnings on cigar stores. But there we ran into another problem, or, rather, our checking division did. What I am afraid you people do not understand about our Government, your Government and mine, is that we have a proving division. Before any plan is put into effect it is sent to the proving division.

The plan came back with the question, "What, if you prohibit awnings on cigar stores, will happen to the awning industry?" This stumped us for a while, but after considerable more studying and experimenting we hit upon the solution. The result is that we shall ask for a law not prohibiting awnings on cigar stores but requiring that they shall have holes so that one standing under them to escape a shower will have to have an umbrella just the same. I thank you,

Thank you, Mrs. Diebenkorfer. You are a card.

Little Nations Move To Achieve Security

German Rearmament Rumblings of 1933 Bring Eastern Europe to Belief it Can't Depend on League; Treaty-Making in Full Blast.

VIII—Balkan and Other Pacts.
By Hamilton Fish Armstrong
(Editor of Foreign Affairs).

In the autumn of 1933, when the negotiations over the Four Power Pact had run their unsettling course, when the disarmament conference was petering out and German rearmament was everywhere recognized as under way, a feeling arose among most of the states of eastern Europe that they had been thrown back upon their own resources, and that they had better not count for safety on the efficacy of the league or on the support of any particular one of the great powers. Poland began planning to reach a modus vivendi with Germany. The Little Entente tried to close its political and economic lines still more closely. Among the Balkan states there was feverish diplomatic activity and much talk of securing pacts. And, still further afield, Turkey rapidly made treaties of nonaggression with Greece, Rumania and Yugoslavia, hoping thereby to be able to remain neutral in case war came in western Europe.

Even Bulgaria, on whom Italy had for many years lavished attentions, began to feel like getting loose from Mussolini's leading strings. His plans for treaty revision had fallen through. Bulgaria knew that her neighbors, stirred by those plans, were preparing to encircle her with a network of treaties. For the first time, too, the Bulgarian government was beginning to feel master in its own house. The rival leaders of the Macedonian refugee organizations, which since the war had wielded such power in Bulgaria, had been killing each other off at a great rate, and the ones still on their feet were handicapped by an interruption of their remittances from Italy.

Thus King Boris of Bulgaria was in a frame of mind to accept the advice tendered him during a visit to Paris in September, 1933, namely, to consolidate his position in the Balkans by coming to terms with Yugoslavia, his country's most powerful neighbor. The French had long been worried by the exposed position of Yugoslavia and wanted to see her close the back door to Bulgarian invasion in case trouble should develop with Italy. King Alexander proceeded to facilitate a rapprochement by going down to the Belgrade station to greet King Boris as he was passing through on his way back to Sofia. It was the first meeting of the two sovereigns in 20 years. Both of them young and intelligent, rulers of neighboring countries closely linked by blood and language, they had been separated by two bitter wars and by the quarrel over Macedonia. The two kings talked cordially, and Alexander carried the reconciliation further by stopping over at Boris' country place on the Black Sea en route to a visit to Mustapha Kemal at Ankara. Then Boris, accompanied by his queen and by the Bulgarian prime minister, paid a state visit to Belgrade, which was the occasion for a demonstration of unexpected popular enthusiasm for the new trend of affairs.

Their Friendship Brings Disquiet to the French.

All this was a little more than France had bargained for. She wanted Yugoslavia and Bulgaria to be friends, but she did not want them to form an alliance and break up the Little Entente. Rumania and Czechoslovakia also were naturally worried, while Greece felt that if Yugoslavia and Bulgaria worked too closely together they might at some convenient moment descend upon the northern coast of the Aegean. There had long been talk of a Balkan pact to stabilize frontiers and minimize the risks of conflict, and a year previously King Alexander had given his approval to the idea. It now was hastily revived, and all the persuasive powers of France and of Yugoslavia's partners in the Little Entente were brought to bear to gain her adherence. Even Italy favored the pact, because it tended to break up her protege's new friendship for Yugoslavia. King Alexander was loath to accept a treaty which Bulgaria could not be expected to sign (it would entail her abandoning all claims to treaty revision), but he had given his approval to the idea long before and he probably felt he had no choice. The Balkan pact was signed by Rumania, Greece, Turkey and Yugoslavia at Athens on February 9, 1934.

Having achieved all she could to break up the Yugoslav-Bulgar rapprochement, Italy now veered around. Venizelos, leader of the Greek opposition parties, suddenly started a campaign to knife the new pact, which of course did not at all accord with Italy's general program of keeping the Balkan situation as fluid as possible. Venizelos alleged in bitter debates in the Greek Parliament that the pact was a hazard because if one of the signatories were attacked by an outside power all the signatories would be bound to go to its help. What he had in mind, he made plain, was a possible war between Italy and Yugoslavia. The bloom was rubbed off the pact, and for a time everybody was annoyed at each other.

Boris Brings Back Agreement on Trade.

In the upshot, Yugoslavia and Bulgaria were not prevented from continuing their work of rapprochement. What Boris brought back from his visit to Belgrade was modest enough, being merely an agreement to set up four commissions to draft a commercial treaty, transit and veterinary conventions (both fairly valuable to Bulgaria, whose shipments to western Europe have been handicapped by Yugoslav restrictions), and a convention for the simplification of frontier and passport formalities. But the experience of Stambuliski, who in 1923 tried to settle the Macedonian question all at once by something like a union between Yugoslavia and Bulgaria, and who failed disastrously, shows the wisdom of beginning slowly.

Yugoslavia will want to make certain that the Bulgarian government can really handle the Macedonian emigrees. One result of the recent coup d'etat in Bulgaria may be to provide the desired proofs. Bulgaria, on the other hand, will have to be satisfied of Yugoslav sincerity, and after years of hostile propaganda on both sides this cannot be done in a day. Beyond question, however, the initiative of the two kings aroused enthusiasm in both countries. And now if the two governments are circumspect and gerenous the ground may be prepared for a more general understanding. Perhaps the first sign will he a treaty of nonaggression. Macedonia would become, instead of a chasm, a bridge between the two south Slav states. And if this treaty served as a model for similar treaties between Bulgaria and her other neighbors one temptation for outside powers to meddle in Balkan affairs would be, if not removed, at least diminished. The only important proviso we must make about the merit of the Yugoslav-Bulgar rapprochement is that it should not proceed too far on a racial basis. It must be fitted into a legal and peaceful all-Balkan frame-work.

Feeling all central and eastern Europe aquiver, Marshal Pilsudski and Foreign Minister Beck decided to take Poland as quickly as possible out of the front line trenches. By their treaty with Germany of January 26, they hoped to divert German ambitions down the Danube Valley, temporarily, at any rate. Meanwhile, Poland has time to put her stamp still more indelibly on the Polish Corridor and Silesia.

Poland Said to Have Eye on Ukraine Conquest.

Those who dislike Polish tactics point out that when the treaty was signed there was talk of a possible Russo-Japanese war. They think Poland may have foreseen that while Soviet forces were occupied in a death struggle in the Far East, she would have a convenient opportunity to extend her rule deeper into the Ukraine—provided arrangements could be made to keep Germany quiet, or at any rate occupied elsewhere. Alternatively there has been talk (described in Warsaw as baseless and ridiculous) of a revival of the war-time German plan to weaken Russia by creating an independent Ukrainian state, Poland to receive compensation in Lithuania and Latvia. Now the Poles are a self-confident and ambitious people, proud of their persistence in adversity and of the organizing abilities they have demonstrated in the 15 years since they regained their independence; and of all Poles their present rulers are among the most self-confident and ambitious. A joint German and Polish adventure toward the east is also part of the program of certain Nazi leaders. More likely, however, Poland was merely determined to avoid being thrown too heavily into the arms of Russia and thus, into open opposition to Germany. The subsequent prolongation of the Polish-Russian nonaggression pact to 1945 confirms this view.

Whatever Poland's objectives, immediate or long-range, her neighbors looked upon the treaty with Germany as a breaking of faith. They had claimed unanimously that Hitler's word was not to be trusted, and here was one of them accepting it as though it were valid! To be sure, the treaty specifically refrained from touching territorial—i. e. vital—issues, and lasts for only ten years. But it freed Hitler's hands in the South just at the moment when his drive to annex Austria was most furious. That naturally angered the Little Entente; and France also was disgusted (though M. Paul-Boncour tried to put on a good face), particularly as she had been left in ignorance of what was impending up to the very last moment.

To French complaints Poland replied, "Tu quoque." At last she had found a way to make the French realize the extent of her resentment over her treatment during the Four Power Pact negotiations and over the French newspaper habit of referring to her as a liability and source of Franco-German friction. Poland is a state of 32,000,000 inhabitants. She has handled her post-war finances remarkably well, and today her credit stands exceptionally high. Even if she was not to be called a great power, she was pleased to make plain in Paris that she was not to be slighted.

But Appeal to German Fury Still Is Standing.

All this need not be pressed too far. Principally Poland is glad to be free for a time—even if she guesses it is not for the ten years stipulated—from constant German invective and propaganda about the Corridor. The inscription on the monument at Konigsblick, near the German-Polish frontier, still stands: "Germans! Never forget what blind hatred has taken away from you! Await the hour that will atone for the disgrace of our bleeding frontier." The appeal still echoes in many angry German hearts. Nevertheless, Poland feels a relaxation of pressure; she feels she has escaped from the direct line of fire.

But if events follow the course laid out by the more extravagant strategists of the Wilhelmstrasse, if Austria eventually falls to Germany, if Hungary then comes into the German orbit, and if Czechoslovakia is torn by an irredentist movement, then Poland may find that though she took herself out of the front-line trenches she, nevertheless, is still very much in the zone of operations. It was no slight decision on her part to assert her ability to handle her difficulties with Germany single-handed, apart not only from France, but apart also from the collective methods of the League Covenant. Very likely she is more conscious of this since France, Soviet Russia and the Little Entente have been stirred to seek a common basis of collaboration. In the event this developed into anything like an alliance or (alternatively) if German hegemony were established in the Danube Valley, then Poland would find herself highly embarrassed.

In broad terms, Poland would then have only this choice—to become Germany's ally, a most terrifying and risky affair, which could easily end by her being used as the battleground for Germany and Russia; or, after her potential allies had been crushed or alienated, to stand up alone in her third-line trenches against an embattled German nation, its eye as of old sweeping the wide arc that begins on the Baltic, carries out across the rich Ukrainian plains and down the Danube Valley, and ends only where the Black Sea and the Aegean open the way to the East. To those who think that such is the stuff that only dreams are made of, the writings of Dr. Alfred Rosenberg and his colleagues in Chancellor Hitler's private "foreign office" will show that this dream is also a program, and that it is being prepared in the long-royal Bismarckian sense by those who control important forces in a modernized, industrialized state of 65,000,000 inhabitants in the heart of Germany.

Mr. Armstrong's ninth article, "How Will France Choose?" will appear tomorrow.

No End of Books

By

Theodore Hall

Fiction for Voracious Readers.

IF YOU feel like a practice run to warm up for the summer's fiction, try some of the following—from gay children to anything but gay murder.

THEO. HALL.

A bookseller who saw an advance copy of N. Warner Hooke's "Striplings" (Dutton, $2.50) praised Allah for another "Helen's Babies." But Biff and Netta, from 8 to 15, are definitely of our frank and explicit time. Brother and half-sister, they grow up with an extraordinary fondness for each other. In the end that foreshadows tragedy. But through the bulk of the novel their homely and humorous little pranks on their mother's English farm will keep you chuckling.

This is the author's first novel. Readers are invited to guess whether it is the work of a man or a woman. I say obviously woman. Men don't often write in a swift laconic manner, full at the same time emotional subtlety. I commend a strangely engaging novel to you.

Grace Flandrau's "Indeed This Flesh" (Smith & Haas, $2.50) strikes me as a powerful rendering of the impressiveness of the ordinary man. For William Quane, in the turgidly growing days of St. Paul 40 years ago, was quite usual. Second generation pioneer stock dreamed of virtue and riches, and got caught in the crush and sin of the present. Everything beyond Quane's reach was golden. What he had was dust—and the Victorian curse did not let him forget that.

In the midst of her carefully painted scene, Mrs. Flandrau sets her hero, makes him suffer, lets him work toward retribution and equipoise. Unless you like the serious analytical sort of novel, you may find this is a bit slow-moving. But Mrs. Flandrau writes carefully and well. She ought to, being the wife of Charles Flandrau.

For all that Lady Eleanor Smith is young, handsome, popular in London society and daughter of the late Earl of Birkenhead ("reputed to have had the best legal brain in England"), her short stories of melodrama in the circus, gypsy camp, wax-works museum and other such luscious places are straight 1910. If you are over 40, you may like "Satan's Circus" (Bobbs-Merrill, $2.50) for that very reason. If you are under 40 you will have to be a confirmed romanticist.

I am sorry that I've never liked Evelyn Scott. She tries so awfully hard to be important, and her writing cries out at every sentence: "See how flexible, aware and articulate this is—this is style!" But it's Robert Louis Stevenson at a depth he never reached.

So I didn't get very far with "Breathe Upon These Slain" (Smith & Haas, $2.50). I found it was about an English family from the 90's to these 30's (which was enough to afflict me—once "Cavalcade" is done, it's done) centered in an old house in the East of England, with dead sons and mad daughters and suicidal fathers.

Miss Scott, an American, got all this from renting such a house for a while. I wonder how well Phyllis Bentley would do with a few months on the Eastern Shore. One can't "cram" to write a novel.

• • • •

You most likely read John Erskine's "Bachelor of Arts" (Bobbs-Merrill, $2.50) while it ran serially in The Post. If you didn't, you'll have a grand time with it. Although Mr. Erskine would have us think it's all very serious, youth meeting the new era and so forth, he doesn't rub it in too much. A very amusing picture of young love at Columbia University.

• • • •

"Death on the Outer Shoal" (Dutton, $2), by Anne Fuller and Marcus Allen. Homicide on an island off the coast of Maine, with much overdrawn Down East color. Fair.

• • • •

"The Third Owl" (Bobbs-Merrill, $2), by Robert J. Casey. The rich Hinchcliffes lived in a castle in Illinois. Over a doorway they had a stone frieze from Bergundy—five owls in a row. A number of ripe horrors were laid to the third owl. Pretty extravagant, but gruesome.

• • • •

"Eyes in the Wall" (Lippincott, $2), by Carolyn Wells. This time the famous Fleming Stone solves three murders in the art world. Portrait painters and critics form the cast. Swell.

JOHN HOLMES OVERTON, U. S. Senator, whose energies are for the present devoted chiefly to efforts at retention of his seat against protests of many righteous Louisiana ladies. They credit, correctly, his election in 1932 to the Senate's No. 1 bad boy, Huey Pierce Long. He's a tariff protectionist and a Democrat. One of the few in captivity. Voted against the President's reciprocal tariff bill. That was his own idea. Most of the time he goes along with the Kingfish. Born September 17, 1875, at Marksville, Avoyelles Parish, La. Graduated from the Louisiana State University and Agricultural and Mechanical College in 1895 with the degree of A. B., and from Tulane Law School in 1897. Married. Four children. Elected to the Seventy-second Congress in special election to fill vacancy caused by death of James B. Aswell. Over 56,000 votes better than Edwin S. Broussard in the 1932 senatorial primary.

Such a large proportion of those who have been pictured by Mr. Robles have asked for the originals that The Washington Post is saving all these drawings to honor the requests of any future members of "The National Gallery."

Possession Naught if Man Lacks Power to Enjoy

By Robert Quillen

East of our village lived two farmers—one a tenant who was called a poor man, and the other a landowner who was considered rich.

The tenant had a comely wife whom he adored and a small son who was the apple of his eye. No sum of money could have tempted him to part with either.

He was a young man, full of vigor, and work under the sun gave him a hearty appetite and a good digestion. Three times each day he sat down with his family and ate his fill of the things he most enjoyed.

Each morning he saw the miracle of sunrise and heard the joyous chorus of birds welcoming a new day. Each evening he saw the sunset and felt drawn closer to his mate by the gentle melancholy of twilight.

Each day he looked from east to west and north to south and said to himself quite truthfully: "All of this beauty is mine to see, and no man can take it from me or enjoy it more."

In what particular, then, was the landowner richer than the tenant?

Why, you say, he owned his land and the tenant did not.

But "ownership" is nothing more than a word we use to fool ourselves. Nobody owns anything.

The tenant raised cotton and gave a portion of each crop for the privilege of living on the land and using it.

The other man did the same thing in another way. He had paid $12,000 in a lump sum and he also paid a yearly tax, and all he got in return was the privilege of living on the land and using it as the tenant did.

As it happened, he was cheated of his just dues, for he died of apoplexy within a year and the land was occupied by a new "owner."

If one man owned the whole earth, other men would still use it and get a living from it as they do now.

If one man claimed legal title to the sunset, would you let foolish envy spoil your enjoyment of it?

Daily Talk About Books and Authors

The Love of Live.

Requiem.

Under the wide and starry sky,
Dig the grave and let me lie.
Glad did I live and gladly die.
And I laid me down with a will.

This be the verse you grave for me:
Here he lies where he longed to be;
Home is the sailor, home from the sea,
And the hunter from the hill.

The beautiful language and rhythm of these lines, together with their modesty and sincerity of expression have made them naturally a favorite poem with all lovers of literature.

It is probable, also, that although Stevenson was intensely interested in life, his chronic ill health loosened his tenacity; and he was quite willing to leave it. But in the poem he says more than that, "Here he lies where he longed to be."

For my part, except in periods of acute mental depression, I have never wanted to die, and certainly do not long for death.

I have the most intense love of life. I should like to live for the next 500 years in New Haven, Conn., asking only the privilege of renewal when the five centuries expired.

For some unknown reason, it is thought to indicate unworthiness or inferiority, or downright vulgarity, if one wishes to live. My friend Mr. Santayana says that no one ought to be willing to live except on his own terms, and that the really intelligent man does not very much want to live at all.

I do not feel that way. I do not envy the inhabitants of cemeteries, I want to live and not to die.

I am somewhat comforted in my clinging to life by what Dr. Johnson said of death when some one called it sleep: "It is neither pleasing nor sleep; it is nothing. Now, mere existence is so much better than nothing that one would rather exist, even in pain, than not exist."

He also said that the better a man was, the more fear he had of death. He repeatedly confessed that he regarded death with terror. I think it was because he loved life with all his heart; pleasant companions, dinners, taverns, city life, travel, intellectual associations, intellectual curiosity, the very real pleasure of thought.

Most men, I think, regard death in the language of Claudio, in Shapespeare's "Measure for Measure," Act III, Scene I, lines 116 and following. Look them up.

Be sure they're well-equipped with straight legs, strong bones

IT TAKES an enormous store of health and energy to keep children active and untiring. And it takes more than that: straight legs, upright backs, full chests, husky jaws and teeth. To assure your youngsters of normal development, guard them against rickets—the common disease of babyhood and childhood. Too little vitamin D results in rickets; enough vitamin D, the Sunshine Vitamin, prevents or cures it.

Old Favorites In Mat Bout Tonight

Szabo-Malcewicz Feature of Good Card at Griffith Stadium.

RASSLING may be down, due to the excitement of legalized boxing, but it is not out and will have its innings at the Nats' apple orchard tonight when five more-than-ordinary bouts will be staged.

Two popular old-timers draw the feature spot. Sandor Szabo, the newlywed, returning after a long absence to exchange what rasslers exchange with Joe Malcewicz, the old Utica Panther. Szabo is a colorful Hungarian lad, who learned the tricks of his trade at the University of Budapest. When he first came to this country and started rassling for a living, he won 42 matches in succession before being thrown. Malcewicz, an aggressive and speedy worker, made quite a hit here at the Auditorium last winter, and the two appear to be particularly well matched.

Semifinal Show-Stealer.

Dick Shikat, former pretender to the throne, who lost any and all of his claims to Jim Londos, may be forced to extend himself and show his real class in the semifinal fracas, for he takes on Earl McCready, a better than average performer. Ths bout may prove to be a show-stealer. As an insentive to both boys to give their all, promoter Joe Turner is dangling a future Londos bout before their eyes. All the winner has to do to get a title chance is also to beat Everett Marshall.

To Shikat, the proposition sounds exceedingly good. Ever since he lost his title claims to Londos, the Greek has managed to be somewhere else when Shikat has been around. This will be his first chance to get a return crack at Londos and he probably will do his best to earn it, even though it calls for clearing the Marshall hurdle if he gets by McCready tonight.

Heart Attack Closes Career Of Dr. Jenkins

D. C. Inventor of Picture Projection and Radio Visualizing Dies.

Dr. C. Francis Jenkins, inventor of the motion picture projector and the radiovision and telephotography systems bearing his name, died yesterday of heart disease at his residence, 5502 Sixteenth street northwest. He was 67 years old.

Stricken with an attack of angina pectoris on the West Coast in 1931, Dr. Jenkins had been in ill-health for the past three years. Returning to Washington, he began a battle to regain his shattered health. Apparently he was on the way to recovery when he suffered a second attack last March. He had lingered between life and death since then.

Dr. Jenkins, dhring recuperative periods, attempted to continue supervision of erperiments at his laboratory on Connecticut avenue in connection with his most recent development, a home motion picture and sound camera. He was forced to abandon his scientific research some months ago, however, and closed the historic little laboratory near Dupont Circle, where many of his brain children had been born.

Wife at Bedside.

His long and untiring work over the complex problems of his laboratory overtaxed Dr. Jenkins' heart, brought his collapse and subsequent death, physicians said. Always a close companion and adviser to her husband, his wife was at his bedside when he passed away at 3 a. m.

Dr. Jenkins' career rivaled any fiction story of a rise from humble beginnings to wealth and power. He was born of Quaker parents on an Indiana farm, and after his education acquired a Treasury clerkship in Washington. Disappointments and setbacks, and the fingers of fellow clerks pointing in impolite derision when Jenkins dreamed of making pictures move on the screen, ended eventually in smashing success and world recognition.

Among the honors which poured upon him when he achieved recognition as one of the world's foremost scientists were the John Scott and Elliott Cresson gold medals of the Franklin Institute Philadelphia, an honorary degree from Earlham College, Richmond, Ind., and memberships in many world-famous scientific organizations.

Career Crowned in 1928.

The peak of Dr. Jenkins' career came in 1928, when he sold his television patents to the Jenkins Television Corporation for $250,000 in cash and stock valued at the time in the millions.

Dr. Jenkins first began dabbling with inventions in 1890, as a clerk in the United States Life-Saving Service. Later, on that job and in Washington, he was regarded by certain associates as "queer" because of his inventive ideas, and often was menaced by dismissal because of his preoccupation.

In 1892 he perfected a moving-picture machine before a dazzled audience whose eyes were fixed on the improvised silk-handkerchief screen while figures actually walked and bowed under the magic of projection. This crude idea became the present projector.

Becoming intensely interested in "horseless" carriages, Dr. Jenkins built the first automobile ever seen in Washington in 1898. It chugged spasmodically along the streets at a rate of 8 miles per hour. He perfected many improvements in the automobiles of the early era.

Then Came Telephotography.

Picture transmission next began to interest Dr. Jenkins, and he gave his first demonstration in telephotography in 1922. Next year he transmitted pictures of President Harding, Herbert Hoover and Gov. Pinchot to Philadelphia, and they were printed in newspapers there.

Dr. Jenkins, a man who served successfully many masters, did not confine all of his time to the perfection of radio and vision inventions. He perfected a number of other devices, including a camera capable of taking 4,000 exposures per second.

Bullets were caught in flight by this remarkable device, as were hummingbirds and other swift-moving objects. Several of these cameras were purchased by foreign governments.

Furthering his work in radio vision, Dr. Jenkins built a broadcasting station in nearby Maryland and bought a plane, which he called his "flying laboratory."

An Author, Too.

Droning over the Capital with his sending apparatus installed in his machine, Dr. Jenkins sent radiovision broadcasts to the ground station and later inaugurated a regular daily broadcast of radio movies synchronized with sound, the first undertaking of its kind the world has known.

Dr. Jenkins' pen waits not idle during his later days. He was the author of "Visionby Radio," "Radio Photographs and Radio Photograms."

Surviving Dr. Jenkins are his widow, Mrs. Grace Love Jenkins; his father, A. M. Jenkins, 90, and two brothers, William A. and Atwood L. Jenkins, all of Richmond, Ind. The father and brothers are en route to Washington.

Funeral services will be held at the late residence Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock, with the Rev. Dr. H. W. Durgan, pastor of the Hamline M. E. Church, and the Rev. Dr. Chasteen Smith, of the Memorial M. E. Church, officiating. Burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Water for Monkeys.

Salt Lake City, Utah (U.P.).—Monkeys in Salt Lake City's zoo will not be entirely without water because of a threatened shut-off by the water department. Mrs. George Sundom, Freeport, Ill., sent a 2-ounce bottle of water, with a note reading, "Feed to the monkeys daily."

New Orleans Death Rate Low.

New Orleans (U.P.).—The death rate for New Orleans hit a record low for April during the last month, Dr. William H. Robin, superintendent of the city board of health, announced today. There were 14.66 deaths per 1,000 persons.

Dawn's Energy May Keep World Revolving East to West

New Theory Based on Sun's Heat Expanding Atmosphere.

The delicate, pink-tipped fingers of the dawn may be supplying the "push" that keeps the ponderous, 6 sextillion, 592 quintillion-ton each spinning on its axis.

"pushes the earth around" by its

The suggestion that dawn literally effect on the earth's atmosphere has been made by an unnamed scientist, writing to the Smithsonion Institution.

Dr. Charles G. Abbot, secretary of the Smithsonian, considers it important enough to bring to attention of scientists in a letter to Science, official journal of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

Dawn keeps the earth spinning by expanding the atmosphere on its eastern edge and thereby giving greater leverage on that side for the heat and radiation pressure of the sun, according to the new suggestion. This would keep the earth spinning from east to west.

Although heat and light are not usually thought of as exerting "pressure," the vast heat and light of the sun actually do put a tremendous pressure on the earth. In the past this was not considered as helping to spin the earth, however, because the sun's pressure was thought to be equal all over the globe's surface.

The new idea is that pressure is greatest on the eastern "limb," or edge, of the earth because the heat of the rising sun at dawn would expand the atmosphere at that point after it had become cool during the night. All gases, such as air, expand when heated. This would make the atmosphere constantly deeper on the side toward the rising sun, and the pressure of the sun's heat and light would be given a greater leverage there, pushing the earth around from west to east.

Detectives Were There in Dinner Jackets

"Well, I'm here to serve you a summons and complaint in the action of Gerald Gerrish against you"

EYEBROWS lifted; people began talking quickly, loudly, to cover her embarrassment and their own. The man raised his voice even more.

"This is an action brought by the plaintiff to recover money advanced to you on your promise to marry," cried the man.

There was no one within a radius of fifty feet who didn't hear the words. Baxter dropped the glass of water and stepped forward . . .

Startling price reductions, just announced, place Chevrolet further ahead of its field than ever—in price, quality and value

CHEVROLET In the face of the biggest demand in years, right when the trend toward Chevrolet is at its peak, Chevrolet reduces prices! No wonder America was startled when this news flashed across the country just a few days ago. And now that the public has had a chance to figure out what this price reduction means in terms of greater value, the news becomes even more important than before. Because it means that Chevrolet now offers you a big, substantial, quality car with the famous valve-in-head engine for as little as $465, f. o. b. Flint, Mich.—making it by far the lowest-priced Six in the world. It means that you can get enclosed Knee-Action, Blue-Flame performance, cable-controlled brakes, and all the other big advancements of the day, for as much as $35.00 less than before—and Chevrolet's former prices were already among the lowest of the low. It means, in short, that Chevrolet now presents America with the finest buy the low-price field has ever seen.

Distribution.

I walked along the Greenland shore, my warthog at my heels, and said: "It soon will snow some more, the way this north wind feels. The snow, already 10 feet deep, makes progress rather slow; the drifts are furlongs high, and steep, and we shall have more snow. We can not use a hundredth part of all the snow in sight, and so the prospect breaks the heart, that there'll be more tonight. And there are hot and burning lands where roasted people go, and they bake and stew and wring their hands, they'd give their heads for snow. A snowdrift on Sahara's face were better than a feast; but snow ne'er falls in such a place, it falls where needed least." I walked along the forest aisles in dank, sepulchral gloom; the trees stretched out for miles and miles, and filled up all the room. I came from bare and windswept plains, where not a tree was known; there was no shade for lovesick swains, for horses, bay or roan. An oak or elm, perhaps a yew, would be a blessing there; but all the fool trees grew and grew where there was shade to spare. I have much reason to complain of how the world is run, but criticism seems in vain, when all is said and done.

Roosevelts Slate Many Activities

President Will Entertain for Prince Konoye Tomorrow.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

It is generally conceded that the White House is one of the busiest places in this country, and there certainly is not a doubt that the President and the First Lady head a most energetic family. Even in the past week, when nearly every one else had dropped everything either to pack for the summer or, if unable to get away from the city, at least to dream of doing so, the Roosevelts have been paying visits, traveling and entertaining in honor of visiting dignitaries.

Last evening Mrs. Roosevelt, accompanied by Mrs. Harold L. Ickes, wife of the Secretary of the Interior, left for West Virginia.

This morning they will stop in Elkins to have breakfast with Gov. and Mrs. H. G. Kump. After that they will motor to Reedsville to inspect the subsistence homestead project. They will return to the Capital late this evening.

Konoye Luncheon.

Tomorrow President Roosevelt will be host at a men's luncheon in honor of the head of the House of Peers of Japan, Prince Konoye, who will arrive in Washington at 5 o'clock this afternoon from New York. Late tomorrow afternoon Mrs. Roosevelt will attend the unveiling of the tablet to the memory of Maj. Gen. George Barnett, commandant of the Marine Corps during the World War.

On Sunday Mrs. Roosevelt will go to Durham, N. C., where, on Monday, she will make an address at Duke University. While in North Carolina, the First Lady will stop in Raleigh, where she will be entertained by the United States Ambassador to Mexico and Mrs. Josephus Daniels at their home.

Returning to Washington on Tuesday, Mrs. Roosevelt will be the luncheon guest of Miss Lavinia Engle at the Congressional Club.

Plan Trip to Races.

The plans which the President and Mrs. Roosevelt have been making for the trip to New London to see the Harvard-Yale boat races, are still quite unsettled.

Mrs. Roosevelt will accompany the President to New York to bid him bon voyage when he sets sail on his summer cruise of the Caribbean Sea and the Pacific Ocean aboard the Navy cruiser Houston.

From the end of this month until the first of September Mrs. Roosevelt will spend most of her time away from Washington, stopping in the mountains for about two weeks, and taking a motor trip through the West. On one of her visits she will go to the Tennessee Valley, where she is interested in the housing and development plans at Norris. Later in the summer she will visit the newest Roosevelt grandchild, little Ruth Chandler Roosevelt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elliott Roosevelt. After that Mrs. Roosevelt plans to meet the President when he lands on the West Coast at the end of his cruise, and with him will return overland by train.

Princess Cantacuzene will relate some of her early experiences in Russia and the circumstances that brought about the present conditions in that country, at 7 o'clock tonight at the Arts Club of Washington, 2017 I street northwest.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank B. Steele will be hosts of the evening.

Justice Council of Sons and Daughters of Liberty will meet this evening. Following the meeting the members will play bingo and stage a "bonnet parade."

Polish Women's Status Bettered

WHAT has been known in the last few decades as the "emancipation of women" has today resolved itself into the "Americanization of women" in many parts of central Europe, particularly Poland, according to Bertha Crawford, operatic and concert singer, who recently returned to the United States aboard the liner Pulaski, after seven years in Europe.

"In the young republic of Poland, the last half-dozen years have witnessed a remarkable uplift in the status of women, a widening outlook and an increase in opportunities in the professions and arts," said Miss Crawford. "Today, with seventeen women in the Sjem, or Senate, Poland has more women members in a national legislature than any other country in the world."

"The kinship between American and Polish women lies chiefly in the fact they are both individualistic. In Italy, women are merely 'assistants' to men. In Poland and America they are equal to men, equally respected. However, whereas American women are more interested in business, the Polish women have centered their interest in family life. Despite the many women in the professions—particularly medicine, law, teaching and art—I found few who would sacrifice a family life for a career, as they do in America. And in Poland, it must be remembered women are not dominated in their family life."

Woman's Club Garden Party Will Be Today

National Woman's Country Club Event to Entertain Celebrities.

GYPSY fortune tellers and pretty flower venders will frolic together at the annual garden party at the National Woman's Country Club this afternoon.

World celebrities, decked in their garden party best, will also frolic; and under that strange spell garden parties cast, will purchase other people's white elephants; listen credulously to the weird prophecies of amateur fortune tellers, and purchase daisies from pretty flower girls.

So thrilling have been the preparations for the event even the youngest members of the youngest generation have caught the spirit of the occasion. And Mary Elizabeth Hughes, 9-year-old daughter of Mrs. James G. Hughes, member of the governing board of the club, has spent many hours picking daisies to decorate the booths. She is also planning to help at the festival.

The garden party, started in 1929, is now one of the most brilliant events of the year, and is attended by officials and diplomats. Mrs. Walter Tuckerman, president of the club, is in charge of arrangements. Mrs. Frank Mondell, vice president, and Mrs. Charles McNary, chairman of the house committee, are helping with decorations and arrangements. Mrs. Carl Droop will be in charge of the flower booth; Mrs. Effington L. Townsend will sell soft drinks; Mrs. Elonzo Tyner, who has just returned from an extensive trip in the West, will tell the fortunes; candy will be sold by Mrs. Charles Williams, Mrs. A. Walter and Mrs. Thomas H. C. Reed.

Perils of the Cocktail Hour Are Refuted

NEW YORK, June 6 (U.P.). Prominent New Yorkers who get about and see things were extremely critical today of F. Scott McBride's statement that the cocktail hour is perilous to young women of the Nation.

Raconteurs, a flier, an orchestra leader, a maitre d'hotel and a pair prominent on stage and screen raised critical eyebrows to the charge made by the Anti-Saloon League superintendent that repeal has proved to be the "ignoble experiment."

"I've seen no moral collapse," said Constance Talmadge, "and no physical."

Her brother-in-law, George Jessel, comedian, expressed similar sentiments, opining that if the cocktail hour were taboo, it would degenerate into a "furtive drink-fast meeting."

George Jean Nathan, author and critic, pooh-poohed the league superintendent's moral philosophy "as idiotic, but his health philosophy is good."

"Drink never ruined a girl, but cocktails might ruin her stomach," he added sagely, recommending wine as the proper 5 o'clock beverage.

Amelia Earhart, only woman to fly solo over the Atlantic, saw no reason why alcohol should be worse for women than for men.

"Quantity, not sex, is what matters in drinking," she said.

The cocktail hour, according to Vincent Lopez, "is far from being the near-brawl Mr. McBride would make it out to be. It provides a restful and recreational interlude."

They Scout Theory Elimination Of War Profit Insures Peace

Two Collegians Agree Sooner U. S. Returns to Jeffersonian Principles of No Foreign Entanglements the Better; Hands Off Japan, One of Them Advises.

"American youth is going pacifist!" "American youth goes militaristic!" "Educated American youth advocates disarmament!" "Educated American youth advocates re-strengthening of Army and Navy!" Such conflicting reports as these have screamed at us from headlines of newspapers for the past year. Just how much foundation do any of these have? Does the college career promulgate antiwar sentiments? Or does it promote militarism? This is the second of four articles based on interviews with representative students of Washington universities.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

"I HAVE gained as much from my association with other students as from my books during my five years' college course."

"I have gotten little from my associates. Most of what I've learned has come from my studies and from my professors."

The first statement came from Walter Gordon Donnelly, president of the senior class and the student council of Georgetown University's School of Foreign Service.

The other was from his roommate, John Lewis Murphy, an "A" student in the same college.

"Aw, Murf, you don't mean that," laughingly protested Donnelly. "You know good and well you've gotten a lot from your associates."

"I haven't," replied the other, gravely. "Most of what I've learned has come from my books—not from my acquaintances."

Antiwar Leanings.

What, then, were some opinions these two had formulated against the background of what they had learned—the one from both his classes and his classmates, the other solely from his studies? Were they, for instance, militarists or pacifists after five years spent in a foreign service school?

"You'll find most of us have antiwar leanings," began the personable Mr. Donnelly.

"Yes, antiwar, but by no means pacifist," added his roommate.

Did this mean they advocated disarmament?

"Not by any means," hastily replied the attractive, linen-clad Mr. Murphy. "Adequate National defense is the cheapest peace insurance in the world."

"This propaganda about reciprocal treaties for cutting down armaments of all nations wouldn't work," put in the other. "But as long as our country is strongly armed, and other nations are afraid to jump on us, we can be assured of peace."

Did either of these youthful young men believe if profit were eliminated from war, there would be no more war?

"How could profit be eliminated from war?" asked Murphy. Then, answering his own question: "It's impossible. If munition factories were owned and controlled by the Government, the profit equation would be just as important. The Government is as selfish and greedy as the individual any day.

"No, the only way to insure peace of the United States is for us to have two well-equipped fleets—one in the Atlantic and one in the Pacific—and as strong an army as we can support."

Leave Japan Alone.

Did Mr. Donnelly have anything to add to that?

He did. The United States, he said, should never disarm.

"Another thing," he added, "the United States should keep its hands out of Japanese affairs."

This led to an agreement between the two students that the sooner our country returned to the Jeffersonian principle of no foreign entanglements, the better off it would be.

All right. What next?

"The United States should strengthen its position with Latin-American countries," ventured Mr. Murphy. "We should be a good neighbor to those countries, instead of just pretending to be.

"And collect our war debts," added Donnelly.

"By all means," went on the other, "the United States should collect its war debts, even though it has to put on an iron glove to do it!"

Antiwar though these students admitted themselves to be, one would hardly call them pacifists.

But what of representatives of other colleges? Would a woman graduate have as definite ideas about war and its prevention? Would she have suggestions to offer on other steps the United States should take?

With these questions in mind, the interviewer sought out Miss Uriel Sheehy, who only four hours before had received her degree from Trinity College.

As she sat in the lounge of the Willard, her smartly-cut green crepe dress contrasting pleasingly with her dark hair and blue eyes, the interviewer doubted thoughts of war, foreign entanglements and preparedness had ever entered her pretty head.

Yet one might as well find out. Was Miss Uriel Sheehy opposed to war?

Indeed she was. She and her classmates had often discussed the probability of another war, and the dread of seeing their loved ones go to an almost certain death.

Believes in Preparedness.

Very well, and did she believe all nations should disarm? Should the United States lead the way and set the example in this regard?

"The United States should remain prepared as long as any other nation," she replied. "I am against war, but I believe in preparedness. If war can be averted by reciprocal treaties, that would be ideal."

Inquiries as to pacifist or militaristic leanings were next put to two representative students from the engineering school of Catholic University.

Edward Blake White a Washington boy, was the first interviewed. What did this thoughtful young man, an honor student in his class, believe about war?

"I've been too busy studying to think much about it," he admitted. "I'm opposed to war, but I suppose we'll always be faced with wars so long as nations are striving to excel each other."

Robert J. Connor, another Washington boy and student in the engineering school of Catholic University, also agreed he had antiwar leanings.

"I haven't thought much about the subject," he said, "but on the spur of the moment I'd say we should keep our National defense up as much as other nations."

Past Century Helped Status Of the Child

THE last 100 years have been kind to children.

Since 1833 the death rate has been greatly reduced; diets have been scientifically planned for adolescents; physical defects have been arrested or corrected in the majority of cases; mental hygiene has become an important part of school and home training; child labor has been diminished.

These encouraging facts are brought out by the Children's Bureau of the United States Department of Labor, in a booklet on the history of child welfare in this country during the last 100 years. The booklet is being distributed by the bureau at its exhibit in the Century of Progress Exposition, Chicago.

In 1833 the only infant mortality records were the inscriptions on little tombstones. Now figures are carefully tabulated and each year the number becomes less. But the infant death rate is still far too high, according to the Children's Bureau.

"A hundred and fifty thousand babies a year still die before they reach their first birthday," states the booklet.

Child welfare work has brought about a great change in the public's attitude toward the delinquent and dependent child. Today young dependents are given homes in cottage institutions and are reared under conditions as ideal as trained social workers can make them.

"During the past hundred years we have made great strides in child welfare," states the booklet. "But much remains to be done before every boy and girl in this country has anything approximating a fair start in life."

Swimming Stars Go Into Action In Major Meet

Season Opened Decoration Day When Olympic Headliners Competed.

By Ware Torrey and Janet Owen.

SUNBURN is upon us again, and the usual controversy as to fresh or salt water bathing. It all depends on whether you're better at keeping your eyes open under water, or adding a decorative note to the beach.

In the meantime, the girls who take swimming and diving seriously are going into action.

The season officially opened in the East with the first major meet of the outdoor schedule, held by the Women's Swimming Association at Manhattan Beach on Decoration Day. Olympic stars and National title holders competed, notably Dorothea Dickinson of the 1932 Olympic team and Susan Robertson, National long-distance champion.

From now on there will be a good deal of shooting at National records, or diving at them. And as the leaders make a firm place for themselves, prophecies will flow to the make-up of the next Olympic team.

The 1936 games are already casting their shadow before, in the way of financial planning. The first of a series of swimming meets, for the benefit of the Olympic swimming fund, was held recently by the W. S. A. in New York.

With swimming in the South and Southern Pacific Coast having a long lead, the practices in other sections have added impetus. Homestead Pa., and New York, with California, make up the three main National centers of swimming stars.

The outdoor Nationals begin to loom, and practicing tends to be heated rather than cooling.

Men Are Held To Have Good Clothes Taste

Women Might Do Well to Take Husbands on Their Shopping Sprees.

MEN as a rule have better taste than women in selecting feminine apparel.

The woman who would choose the higher priced dress or hat would do well to take her husband with her when she goes shopping.

These are a few of the conclusions reached from interviewing saleswomen and buyers who have had wide experience in judging the reactions of husbands, fathers and sweethearts when tugged along to help select the hats and dresses they were paying for.

"Men are usually more generous when they come to the store than when they foot the bills at home," said Miss Mary Rouland, buyer at Hecht's. "The unaccompanied woman will worry over prices and end up by taking a less becoming dress to save money. When the man is along, he will insist not only upon her choosing the more expensive dress but another one or two that he likes.

"But while men may admire sophistication in others, when it comes to their wives or sweethearts, they have a penchant for fluffs and ruffles. So, even a woman who knows better, will try to live up to this romantic idea, age and avoirdupois to the contrary."

A Senator with Taste.

Miss Deal Dillon, buyer for Erlebacher's, believes many men have better taste than women in selecting feminine apparel. Some of the smartest and costliest evening gowns and wraps are chosen by men, who come into the shop alone, she says.

"I know one Senator who selects every dress and wrap worn by the feminine members of his family," she related. "Sometimes they accompany him, and sometimes they don't. But they all agree, he has a better eye for line and color than they have. There are other men, however, who come in to buy a dress to please their wives, and end up by striving to please the models."

"The gigolo has the most decided taste when it comes to selecting feminine wearing apparel," declared Anne Grogan, saleswoman at Lansburgh's. "Usually accompanying a perfect 44 to the shop, he insists upon his companion's being a trim 36 before he will agree to her making her purchase. He is finicky over color and style, and gets jittery over details not even noticed by his companion. If the saleswoman cannot work miracles, he registers his disapproval with characteristic flourishes.

"The grandest customer of all is the father of a 17-year-old daughter. Nothing is too good for his offspring, especially if she is pretty. He is pleased with everything she tries on, and usually ends up by buying her every lovely thing in sight.

"Next in line is the husband who seeks a peace offering for his wife. He usually buys an evening wrap. Price means nothing to him and he is usually all gratitude to those who serve him. However, most men lost all composure and self-confidence when they face a rack of dresses."

"Men have atrocious taste when it comes to women's clothes," declared Miss Eleanor W. Adams, personnel director at Jelleff's. "Left to themselves, they usually want red or bright green, or any other wild color that particularly appeals to themselves. They never voluntarily choose black or any subdued shade. And they rarely take a woman's complexion, age, or size into consideration.

Like a Lamb to Slaughter.

"A man accompanying a woman shopping is like a lamb led to the slaughter. With his eyes riveted on the nearest exit, he is ready to bolt and run at the sight of each frock presented for his inspection. Most feminine customers have a man in their minds when they select clothes, it is true. Still, it is disconcerting for a woman to have to make her decisions in a man's presence.

"On the other hand, some of the most dictatorial men at home are the meekest when they face saleswomen and models. And the wife often gets a squarer deal when such men are along."

"Give men a chance to be honest in their opinions," pleaded Miss Jestine Duck, assistant buyer at the Palais Royal, "and you'll find they have a world of constructive suggestions to offer. They are a little sentimental over colors—often hanging out for the one their girl wore when they first met. But they also have a fine sensitiveness to tone and contour that women often ignore.

"Men as a rule don't like prints. They prefer solid colors. Young men like vivid, dashing shades. Older ones lean toward the darker hues. Bachelors in the 40's seem to like pastels best.

"Boys are most critical when they accompany their sisters, and voice all their pet aversions in color or design. Men, young and old, are most easily pleased when they accompany their sweethearts. Nothing too good for their mothers as a rule, only they sometimes prove unflattering by selecting styles too old for them."

McCarls Plan Dinner To Honor Bridal Pair

The Comptroller General of the United States and Mrs. J. R. McCarl will give a dinner at the Shoreham Saturday evening in honor of Miss Elizabeth Hiden Hoge, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William S. Hoge, and her fiance, Mr. Thomas J. Groom, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Franklin Groom, whose wedding will take place at 4:30 o'clock Monday afternoon at the Congressional Country Club.

Beauty Mask That's Different Comes to Town

Strawberry Preparation, Very Efficacious, Going for Little.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

ALONG time ago somebody started the story about opportunity knocking on doors Since then a lot of people sit around and wait for the knock, and when they don't hear it they say opportunity has passed them by. All of which is very unfair to opportunity.

For opportunity is here now but it hasn't wasted time knocking around town. It came in the guise of a marvelous beauty buy. It will remain until Saturday.

A strawberry cream mask, which has for a number of years been regarded as the greatest triumph of one of America's most reliable beauty specialists, is being presented to every woman who makes a two-dollar purchase of her other products. Imagine that—a three-dollar jar of cream given with a two-dollar purchase!

This cream differs from other masks. There is no hardening, and consequently no drawing of the skin. As soon as it's rubbed over the face the skin experiences a tingling coolness. When it is removed 20 minutes later evidences of strain and fatigue have miraculously disappeared. The skin tone is lightened, and the texture soft and silky.

A beautician speaking of it says, "It embodies the rejuvenating powers of sleep, and a complete, and restful facial treatment!"

It has always been a particular favorite of women who strive to appear at their best at the difficult eleventh hour. They find after they have returned home from a strenuous day at the office, or feel utterly fatigued from a set-to at bridge, or a round of golf, it acts as a splendid beauty pick-me-up.

During the days of the sale, the representative of the beauty specialist is in town to give a world of good advice to women who care to drop by and meet her.

Those Summer Feet.

Come summer, come athlete's foot. That's the perennial experience of hundreds of people the city over. And what do they do to help themselves? Some of them ask the druggist for "a good cure." Others ask their friends. Others suffer along as best they can, nuisances to themselves and menaces to others.

Some Eastern laboratories have put a product on the market which they guarantee to cure the worst case of athlete's foot known to man. They are so sure they offer to return the cost to anyone who tries it and expresses dissatisfaction.

The management of a downtown store is so confident this product will do all the things claimed for it a large supply has been ordered. It's easy to apply, just takes a little rubbing, and begins its work immediately.

• • • •

Soapies.

"Hands gather dust
From cranny and nook.
Carry a vial of soap
In your pocketbook!"

Nor do their efforts stop with advice. They have little boxes filled to the brim with this dainty "pocketbook soap," wrapped in numerous cellophane packages, scarcely larger than the little fingernail. There's a heterogeneous assortment of red, green, purple, mauve, blue and brown "vials," each with the powdery soap.

Shoppers who do not consider such a purchase for themselves, might keep it in mind as a clever little "consolation prize" for their next party, or a most delightful going away remembrance.

Down the Extras.

Traveling is usually regarded in the light of a large expense, and ways and means to conveniently economize are not likely to pass unnoticed.

The buyer of the notions department in a downtown store says she is firmly convinced if people would attend to many small "extras" before they left town they could save a deal of money. She knows a lot about the small "extras," and talks to many travelers.

By way of illustration she pointed to some little shoe polishers in the semblance of a suede pouch. These are twenty-five cents, she explained. A polish would be as much, or maybe less. Now for that fifty cents one could polish her shoes about fifty times. Maybe more.

Bar English Style.

The unusual bar featured in a local shop is a relief from the ever black and chrome ones so popular this season. This bar, semi-circular in shape, is colorfully painted across the front, with an old English tavern scene featuring robust gentlemen in jolly red coats.

But it's the back which turns into a real bartender's delight. Here, tier on tier of drawers provide ample space for fruit, silver, glasses, napkins, shaker and the other items that make for a complete bar assemblage. A center door unlocks to disclose a roomy cabinet for bottles, bottles, and bottles. A lower space is set aside for a little tin tub to hold the ice.

The Healthy Swiss Present Recipes That Will Cure as Well as Delight

Courtesy Franz Schneider, Lucerne.

Their Doctors Advise Vegetables, No Meat, Lots of Raw Things.

From the land of health we learn how to keep well. All doctors agree that diet is the thing, but the Swiss diets combine practicality with appeal.

Today, in the fifth of a series on National foods, Switzerland offers ideas on the maintenance of health.

By Susan Mills.

SWITZERLAND. We think of rosy-cheeked yodelers, mountains that pierce the sky, cheese with holes, and places where people go to get well. As a matter of fact, one impression of this country is of a sort of big sanitorium where the clear blue air and prescribed food will cure almost any ailment.

The doctors in Switzerland play a big part, not only in their interest in the sick, but their interest in the healthy. These doctors tell us proper food is essential to proper health.

Too much meat is bad, they say; one should eat green vegetables, fruits, whole-wheat bread and as many raw materials as possible.

This seems a little exaggerated. Every one is made happy by the appearance of a well-cooked steak, the steaming richness of a plum pudding. We eat them and do not appear to be poisoned. Nature is too kind.

But if the system is overcharged with cocktails and caviar, pastry and lobster Newberg, one is bound to feel the effects.

If such is the case try the Swiss methods of cure. Go to the country, lie in the sun, take plenty of exercise and eat your food raw. This may be distasteful and a little boring, but it will bring back lost energy.

Spinach, Soup and Fried.

Now to the diet. Poyeye isn't the only one who prescribes spinach. He may eat it raw, but the Swiss offer a delicious recipe for spinach soup. Wash a pound of spinach, chop fine and press through a sieve. It must be quite smooth. Brown half a finely-chopped onion and two tablespoons of flour in an ounce of butter. Add two pints of milk. Boil ten minutes, add spinach and cook up again. Add salt, a little nutmeg, pour into a tureen over a well-beaten egg and a cup of cream.

Believe it or not, you can fry spinach. Wash and dry large spinach leaves, dip in a thin batter, and fry in fat or oil until golden brown. Salt and serve very hot.

A few raw dishes will give you an idea of the Swiss ingenuity. Here is a raw salad. Cut off the tops of tomatoes and remove the pulp. Paint the inside with a mixture of lemon juice and olive oil. Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Select peas with care and caution. They should be young and half grown. Mix them with mayonnaise made of lemon juice instead of vinegar. Let peas stand in mayonnaise for an hour, fill tomato cups with them, replace the tops and serve on lettuce.

Another Swiss salad is made with raw red cabbage. Cut the cabbage in fine strands, soak in weak wine vinegar (if too strong dilute with water) for about six hours. Drain and add an apple cut small. Arrange in center of a large dish. Slice some cold boiled potatoes, dress with salt, pepper, oil and vinegar, and a cup of cream. Put this mixture around the cabbage and call the family to supper.

The Swiss peasants are great sandwich eaters, not, however, in the American sense of the word. To them a sandwich is not a dainty wisp to be delicately nibbled at tea time, but a hunk of their dark rye bread and a hunk of cheese. Here is a grilled Swiss sandwich, suitable for breakfast or late supper.

Swiss Sandwich.

Cut some fairly large slices of bread and fry in butter on one side. Cover the fried side with a generous slice of Gruyere cheese. Put the bread slices in a well-buttered dish and broil until cheese begins to melt. Fry some eggs and place one on each slice of bread and serve at once.

Speaking of cheeses, the best goat's milk cheese is made from the milk of goats that climb the highest mountains. Only the youngest can climb so far, and the milk of the youngest goats is the best. So the higher they climb, the better the cheese.

A cooling drink for a hot day! Washingtonians will need more and more of them. Here are a couple of Swiss ideas. Add the juice of a lemon to a glass of fresh milk. The lemon should be added drop by drop. Sugar to taste. Milk of almonds is worthy to be called the nectar of the gods. Mix a glass of water with an ounce of pounded almonds. Cook up and strain through a linen cloth. Sweeten with honey and a spoonful of cream or milk.

Simplicity and originality mark Swiss desserts. Try a pineapple surprise. Cut off the top of a large pineapple, and empty it so the rind remains whole and unspoiled; remove the center and cut the pulp in small cubes. Add an equal quantity of candied orange cut in quarters, glace cherries, and nuts. Mix this with the pulp, sugar to taste, add a drop or two of Maraschino. Fill the pineapple shell with the mixture, and replace the top. Chill and serve.

It is easy to glorify baked apples. Peel and halve apples, and remove the core. Lay them on their backs in a buttered baking dish, and fill each core with cream and a spoonful of sugar. Bake until done. It will take 15 to 30 minutes according to the size of the apples.

Lightweight White Wool Coats Go Everywhere This Summer

By Amos Parrish.

NEW YORK, June 7—If you've ever gone through a summer minus a white lightweight wool coat, you've certainly admonished yourself at the season's end with "Never again!" Because you've wanted it for sports events, for garden parties, to wear down to the club, and to church. And you found you could even "get away with it" for an evening party.

It's its general all round usefulness that keeps the white coat up at the top of fashion's list of coats every summer. It goes with light clothes, with dark clothes, with bright clothes. And you always feel well-dressed in one.

Swagger in Lead.

Again the swagger type is the fashion leader. It's a becoming style . . . those loose-hanging lines are easy to wear. Comfortable, too, and particularly practical to wear over fluffy crisp cotton dresses.

Knee length is liked by young folks. Older ones prefer the longer ⅞ length . . . the one which lets only a few inches of the dress show.

This summer there's a new version of the swagger coat . . . the Chinese coolie style sponsored by Molyneux, the Paris designer. One version of this style is sketched.

It has the same easy flare the Chinese garment has. It usually buttons straight down the front, but sometimes down the side front. There's a ripple in the center of the back.

Three-quarters is the length for this coat . . . part way between the short knee length and the long ⅞ length.

Notice the collar. Looks quite school boyish, doesn't it? When it is opened, it lies flat and narrow and has a youth-giving effect.

Dressmaker Coats.

Besides this simple swagger, there are dressier types of white coats . . . with full, loose sleeves, pleated sleeves, tucking details and other so-called "dressmaker" touches.

And that very tailored, almost mannish reefer with notched lapels and fitted waistline is liked by many of the younger set.

Many of these summer coats are unlined, which keeps them comfortable. But lined or not, the wools are lightweight. Tweeds with soft as a feather surfaces, homespuns, wool eponges, white chinchillas. You'l look smart in any of them.

White wool coats of the types described may be found in all the better class shops and department stores.

First Woman "Air" Engineer Will Graduate

Isabel Abel to Get Her Degree in Aeronautics on June 13.

NEW YORK, June 6 (Spl.).—Miss Isabel C. Ebel, who, as a little girl, liked to tear talking dolls apart to see how they worked, will, on June 13, become America's first woman aeronautical engineer. On that date she will be graduated from the Daniel Guggenheim School of Aeronautical Engineering at New York University. She will be the first woman to receive a degree from the school.

A lone girl among 3,000 men students in the school, she made higher grades than most of her colleagues.

Miss Ebel is working on a design for a flying wing type of plane that will be large enough to permit dancing and social activities aloft. She believes there is a big future in aeronautics for women.

"Women comprise about 50 per cent of the passengers now being carried in airplanes," she pointed out, "but engineers design the planes with a view to pleasing men. That isn't right. Commercial flying should be made more attractive to women."

What Today Means

"Gemini."

If June 7 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 8:20 to 10:20 a. m., from 1:20 to 3:20 p. m. and from 7:20 to 9:20 p. m. The danger periods are from 11:20 a. m. to 1:20 p. m., from 4:20 to 6:20 p. m. and from 10:20 p. m. to 12:20 a. m.

Business activities on this date will very likely consist primarily in the negotiation of new deals and the closing up of old ones that have been pending for some time. A healthy condition should exist in the money marts, and there probably may be ample evidence that there is an abundant supply of money available for business expansion purposes. Social activities will possibly be of a very informal but enjoyable type of entertaining, and invitations received should be accepted. There will be a prevalence of good-natured bantering indulged in by most of the people you may meet on this day and it will evince good judgment to enter into the spirit of it. It might be well to remember that a "kill-joy" is never a welcomed addition to a social gathering or a business conference. At the right time and in the proper environment, sentimentality, if voiced with the proper amount of fervor, undoubtly will be attentively listened to by an appreciative ear.

If a woman and your birthday is June 7, your real happiness will come when you investigate more fully the basic fundamental principles that are conducive to contentment, a cheerful spirit, and a sympathetic understanding of your fellow beings. Learn to delve deep into the heart of things, instead of formulating ideas from a more or less superficial observation or investigation. If you do not allow yourself to judge too hurriedly or form opinions too hastily by the outward appearances of persons or inanimate objects, many mistakes in hastily formed opinions may be prevented, and a happier mental outlook on life secured. If doubt is controlled, financial gain will probably result. Love promises to play an important part in your life. Marriage, with a congenial mate means for you connubial bliss. To gain popularity, all that is requisite is a receptive spirit toward proffered friendships and a sense of loyalty to those who accord it to you.

The child born on June 7 will, when it grows up, possess all the desirable attributes parenthood desires, providing those responsible for its training do not shirk their responsibilities.

The man born on June 7 is a good mixer with a personality that wins friends readily. He has the happy faculty of being always able to do the right thing in the proper way.

How to Keep Well

Rheumatism and Warmth.

For the relief of rheumatic and neuralgic pain nothing is so satisfactory as heat applied locally.

Our forefathers could not travel far in search of health when they developed chronic joint troubles because there were no railroads, and covered wagons had their limitations and drawbacks. Therefore they wore red flannel underwear. The surgeons, not liking the looks of red flannel underwear, or being without hope that it can ever be made popular again, devised a certain operation on nerve roots to take its place. After this operation the affected extremities remain continuously warm and in that way pain is lessened and the diseased joints are improved.

Dr. T. A. Lowe has a suggestion for those who are not burdened with great wealth. He offers rubber poultices for pain. He takes slabs of sponge rubber from a quarter to half an inch in thickness, makes them up into pads, and has the patient wear such a pad over the painful area continuously until the pain is gone.

The Talking Sparrow Murders

BY DARWIN TEILHET

The Talking Sparrow Murders was omitted from The Post the first three days of the week to permit persons submitting solutions in connection with the prize contest to formulate their opinions. Now you can read the unraveling of the mystery as the author conceived it.

I HESITATED. Mischa came closer, questioning with her eyes.

The hesitation did not pass unnoticed by Fedl. "Herr Polizeidirektor said to inform you that he believes it will save all of us trouble if you come at once. We have reached Herr Carlson at your Schwetzingen plant. He is coming. Herr Polizeidirektor Kresch has information concerning an associate of Herr Taubek's which——"

If Carlson had already started for Speyer . . .

"I'll be there in 20 minutes," I answered.

As soon as he hung up, I rang for a taxi. Then I explained to Mischa.

"Suppose it's a trap? How do you know it was Fedl's voice. You don't know his voice, do you?"

I hadn't thought of that. This time the telephone fairly danced. It was Carlson, and his voice came quick and commanding. "Bill, I've been trying to get you for the last five minutes! Did—what's his name? —Fedl call you?"

"Finished talking a minute ago."

Geigen Is Free.

"Who?"

"The policeman wouldn't say. The important thing is Geigen's free."

"But——"

"Don't interrupt so damn much. Listen! Tagenbruck's friend has instructions to be in front of your pension at 11. He'll be on his way now. You and—what's her name? —and Mischa—you get in the car and escape. I'll fix it with Kresch. I said I'd get you back, didn't I?" he asked fiercely. "Well, by God! I'm going to."

"You'll fix it with Kresch? Aren't you coming?"

"Me? Hell, I'm going to stay and sell that plant to Geigen. He's free now."

"But the bonds—what'll I do with them?"

"Damn the bonds! Hide them some place. Put them—you've a blotter on your desk? Good! Stick 'em under the blotter and I'll pick them up when I get through with Kresch."

"But Carlson——"

"No arguments, young fella! It's damn near 11 now. The plan's arranged by minutes. You've three hours to reach Baden-Baden. You've got to be there by 2, as Tagenbruck can't wait. He's crossing with you. Good-by, Bill, and good luck. See you in a month!"

"Carlson! Carlson!"

He hung up. I never spoke to him again.

"Well," she asked, quietly, "what's is it now?"

"Carlson again. Geigen's cleared." I picked up the telephone, hoping to reach the taxi stand in time to stop the taxi I had ordered to take me to Speyer. The taxi was just starting. They were able to call it back.

Leaving the Bonds.

I clicked the receiver, swung around, went to the desk. "Carlson's staying to sell the plant. Just you and I are going. Pleased?"

I slipped the bonds back under the blotter and followed the bonds with the slim packet of envelopes containing all the letters I hadn't destroyed. "I'm leaving the bonds and the remaining letters here to be picked up. Kresch can use his own judgment about the letters when he gets them from Carlson or the lawyers. What time is it?"

"Five to 11."

I took out paper to write a short note to Carlson to place alongside the bonds and letters under the blotter.

"You're not going to really leave the bonds?" she questioned.

"Of course"—I glanced up as the full implication of her question came to me. "Think I'm going to take them?"

Abruptly she seemed to make a decision. "Do you think Herr Carlson would deliver a note to—to some one if I wrote it?"

"You can leave yours here with mine."

Out of Door.

She slipped out of the door before I could stop her. I half started after her. I wanted to watch what she was doing. But time was so pressing. After all, she wanted to escape. She couldn't do any harm in her own room. I gave up the idea of going after her, finished my note, placed it next to the bonds.

I looked out of the window at the church clock. It was one minute to 11. I picked up my hat and coat, hastily looked once more under the blotter to make sure the bonds and letters were out of sight, felt for my passport and money in my pockets, and cautiously moved into the hall. Fortunately, none of the boarders was downstairs. At least, I couldn't hear their voices.

I tapped lightly on Mischa's door, pushed it open. She glanced up from her table. "You go down first. It's safer. I'll put my note with yours and meet you in front of the pension in 30 seconds."

I hurried downstairs, down the front steps. Not until I was standing in the street, such was my haste, did I suddenly recall that Mischa would have a chance to take the bonds. I started back just as the noise of a fast-moving auto flooded the shaded street with an ominous drone. An Opel swung up to the curb and I halted on the second steps leading up to the pension.

Kresch stepped out. His face was gray. His bulk waddled up to me. "Herr Tat-zohn," he greeted me amiably, "you weren't waiting for me? Shall we go up to your room? I've arranged for He Carlson to come over here. Fedl will meet him at Speyer. They will come together. It will save time. I have talked with Herr Geigen. He, also unfortunately, is not looking so well this morning.' He gave me an appraising glance and put his hand under my arm. Then excitement throbbed in his thick, mushy voice like the slow throbbing of a jellyfish.

"This time, we have it! I have already telephoned Herr Polizeidirektor Sleischen in Mannheim."

We went into the pension. Mischa would be coming down any minute. Our chance for escape was shattered. Kresch remained close to me, ostentatiously helping me to ascend the steps. As I passed the open door of her room I received what was perhaps the greatest shock of all. Her room was empty!

Mischa was gone.

I felt that there was no longer any necessity to try to squash the little white worm.

Kresch followed me into my room. "Where is Fraulein Dryshenzoff?"

I could tell him where Mischa was. There were three windows in my room. My desk was right next to the third window. When we had entered, I had gone directly to the desk with the intention of discovering whether or not Mischa had taken the bonds, but just as I placed my hand on the blotter, I happened to look out of the window down the street, half expecting, I suppose, to see the car that was to help us escape. The car wasn't there. Mischa was. She was pacing up and down the corner with impatient steps. Somehow she had managed to get out of the pension without being observed by Kresch.

Her presence was reassurance that the bonds were there. I had shoved them far back under the blotter. Even if I had wished to, I couldn't very well risk lifting the blotter with Kresch watching me. Besides, I didn't think there was any need to. I casually turned around.

"Where's Fraulein Dryshenzoff?" he abruptly demanded.

I sat down on the edge of the desk. "You know how girls are. She went out for a walk. Got restless."

"You're sure she hasn't tried to run away?"

Gathright Quits As Comptroller For Virginia

Richmond, June 6 (AP).—A. B. Gathright resigned as State Comptroller today, and Gov. Peery appointed E. R. Combs, of Russell County, to the dual post of State Comptroller and chairman of the new Virginia compensation board, effective June 20.

This move was made today upon the announcement received from Washington of Mr. Combs resignation as manager of the Richmond agency of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, a position which he has held since he left the comptroller's office last December. Mr. Gathright will return to his former position as assistant comptroller, and H. G. Gilmer, a member of the State highway commission, from Wise County, will succeed Mr. Combs as R. F. C. manager here.

Mr. Combs will be returning to the post he held since the office was established in the reorganization of the State government, in 1927, by Gov. Byrd until about six months ago, but with the added duties of administration of the new compensation act.

It was pointed out at the Capitol that Mr. Gathright was appointed State Comptroller only until such time as Mr. Combs might desire to reenter the State's service.

Plea to FERA for $100,000 For Poets' Share Rejected

Laureate League Plan Involved Use of Mount Weather.

Richmond, June 6 (AP).—No longer would the poets have to subsist on locusts and wild honey if the plan of the Poet Laureate League, Inc., met with the approval of the Federal Emergency Relief Administration.

They want to establish a school for poets at Mount Weather, near Blue Mount, where they could dream, perhaps, of Mount Pelion, the mythical abode of poets.

But, unfortunately, Emergency Relief Administrator William A. Smith has been unable to turn a sympathetic ear to the league's plea for $100,000. "There's no way," he said with finality, "for setting up such a project with relief money." He added that $100,000 is a lot of money.

The Poet Laureate League, from its headquarters in Washington, dispatched a letter to Mr. Smith suggesting that $100,000 would be sufficient for the first year. Specifically, the league suggested that Mount Weather, an abandoned experimental station established by the Federal Weather Bureau, be made a school for bards. Sixty thousand dollars would be needed, the league estimated, to put all the houses in first-class condition.

Under the plan suggested, unemployed poets would be hired in the capacities of instructors, clerks typists and stenographers.

"This project may be a little different from the ordinary one which comes to your attention, the league conceded, "but nevertheless we believe that you should be able to handle the details and overcome the obstacles in order to put it into effect. We have introduced a bill for the grant of this property, but due to emergency legislation our bill has been delayed."

"Certainly," the communication continued, "it should be possible to do something in this direction for our poets who have never had any cooperation from the Government in any way. This phase is too well known to need further discussion here."

Important Facts for Smokers Discovered by Science!

Experience of Camel smokers is now Explained

From a famous research laboratory in New York comes a basic discovery that throws new light on our past knowledge about cigarettes. It embodies an "energizing effect" . . . a harmless restoration of the flow of natural body energy . . . a delightful relief from fatigue and irritability. When you smoke a Camel you enjoy an increase in your flow of energy. And this benefit you get from smoking Camels can be enjoyed all through the day . . . without upsetting your nerves.

WORN OUT . . . and then he smoked a Camel!

WHO HASN'T FELT "dog-tired" after work . . . with a long evening ahead . . . and dinner time still an hour away? That's just one of the many, many times during the day when you will want to light up a Camel — for restoring your flow of healthful energy. You'll like Camels — a matchless blend of costlier tobaccos!

Let CAMELS Increase Your Flow of ENERGY

Tired? Light a Camel. And as you enjoy its cool, pleasing fragrance, you feel a new flow of energy . . . a cheering "lift," a quick and delightful "energizing" effect.

IT'S YOUR OWN NATURAL ENERGY RELEASED

You've probably noticed this yourself and have wondered why and how it happened. The "lift" you get from Camels is a release of your own natural energy . . . your latent energy made easily and harmlessly available.

So when you're feeling run-down, tired, "all in," smoke a Camel and see what happens. That tired feeling slips away. You're ready again for work and fun. Camels have helped your own body to help itself and bring you back in "pep" and energy.

AND CAMELS NEVER JANGLE YOUR NERVES

You can smoke just as many of these delightful Camels as you want. You can increase your flow of energy over and over again. And you need never worry about your nerves. For remember: Camel's costlier tobaccos never get on your nerves.

CAMEL'S Costlier Tobaccos never get on your Nerves

Pro Golfers In Open Test Today

Pro Consensus Shows 288 Needed to Win; Luther Has Ace.

By Dave Herman
(Post Staff Correspondent).

MERION CRICKET CLUB, Ardmore, Pa., June 6.—Trained to the minute mentally and physically, 149 of the world's leading professional and amateur golfers will open fire tomorrow over Merion's famous course in the first 18-hole round of the thirty-eighth National Open Championship.

On the eve of golfdom's most important conflict, veteran observers and professionals alike made an "about face" in their pretournament forecasts and predicted that a new scoring record would not be established and that Paul Runyan, much-discussed favorite from Westchester, N. Y., would not win the championship.

Late this evening after most of the big shots had applied the finishing touches to their tune-up rounds, Jack Doyle, Broadway's betting impresario, ambled into the press room and announced to the boys that Gene Sarzen, former British and American open champion, was favored at 5 to 1, Runyan at 7 to 1 and Craig Wood, Deal, N. J., pro and leading money winner of the 1932-33 season, at 10 to 1. On top of these quotations, Doyle is placing even money that 290 will not be broken.

Laffoon Has Following.

The big talk at the course was Ky Laffon, sensational young Denver, (Colo.) pro, who has averaged even 70 in his four practice rounds. Laffon, an half Indian, has been smacking the ball with such remarkable steadiness that even such stars as Sarazen, Joe Kirkwood, Tommy Armour and Bobby Cruikshank are inclined to believe that the Denver lad will be a front runner from the start.

No one seems to be over enthused over the chances of the amateurs. Cornered by his locker, Lawson Little, British amateur champion, admitted his scoring was nothing to brag about.. Little did a 74 in a workout with Armour and Cruikshank.

Defending champion Johnney Goodman, who set the pros on their collective ears by winning the title at North Shore, played a round with Sarazen and matched Gene's 73. Sarazen, co-sharer of the open record at 286 with Chick Evans, said he was quite surprised to see the Nebraskan "hitting the ball so well." The stocky P. G. A. champion doesn't think much of Runyan's chances. He believes that the tournament will develop into a battle between a trio composed of himself, Hagen and Armour, as opposed to the younger triumvirate Wood, Runyan and Laffoon.

Runyan Disappoints.

Runyan was not himself today. He played with Hagen and Dudley, and the gallery was a trifle disappointed. "Little Poison," as Paul is affectionately known, could score no better than 76. He plays tomorrow with Sarazen, in the feature twosome.

Of course, they don't pay off on practice rounds, but, if they did, Wood, Cruickshank, Armour and MacDonald Smith, the canny Carnoustie Scot, would be in the money, judging by their rounds today. Wood played the back nine in 32 after going out in 36. His 68 was not touched. Showing a flash of his old self, Smith banked out a 39—32. Cruickshank found the back nine comparatively easy and got a 33 for a 72 total. Armour had 72, being 3 over for the last five holes.

It remained for one Ted Luther, Oakmont, Pa., pro, to score the only ace since the golfers assembled here last week. He holed out on the 133-yard thirteenth, and exclaimed after his ball trickled into the cup, "I'm quitting—that's enough for me." Luther was 2 under par for the thirteen holes.

Par at Merion Is 70.

Merion has a par of 36, 34—70. The first six holes are plenty tough and it is safe to say that he who conquers the first six will find the rest of the journey much easier. No high explosives are expected tomorrow. The boys have overlooked one thing—the pins have been placed in fairly easy positions on the greens for practice rounds, but drive to nip the fading Colombo by a neck. Windsor Lad, held at 15 to 2 in the wagering, was a length in front of Easton, a 100-to-9 shot.

Windsor Lad Wins Classic at Epsom

Equals Track Record.

Under Charley Smirke's well-judged ride, the aptly named winner, an Irish-bred son of Blandford, ran the one and one-half miles over a sun-baked turf in 2:34, to equal the record made by Hyperion last year.

Only for one fleeting instant did the great majority of the fans who backed Colombo have a chance to cheer.

The highly regarded colt, the shortest priced favorite since the World War, had trailed the leaders in the first long uphill run across from the grand stand and appeared well beaten as he failed to gain ground in the next half mile and the field, led by Tiberius, came flying around Tattenham Corner leading into the final straightaway.

But a quarter of a mile from home a cry arose, "Here comes Colombo!" There he was, coming strong on the outside, moving on Windsor Lad, which was running easily on the rail after taking command at the top of the stretch, and Easton, which had moved up with the Maharaja's colt.

Three-Horse Race.

From there the race was strictly a three-horse affair. One-eighth of a mile from the finish Colombo's drive carried even with the other two for an instant as they hit the final incline. The cheering reached crescendo for a moment and then died as Windsor Lad, in a few strides, put a length between him and the others.

Through the last hundred yards the crowd was so silent that the music from the merry-go-round across the track in the densely packed infield sounded louder than a military band. Not until the winner returned to the stand to receive the official credit for his victory did the crowd overcome the shock of seeing its favorite beaten and accord Windsor Lad an ovation.

Windsor Lad's swarthy owner, who declared a holiday for the employes on his estate at old Windsor near the royal castle, led the colt to the winner's circle, his face wreathed in smiles. Later he was summoned to the royal box to receive the congratulations of King George.

William Woodward's Bondsman, the lone American entry in the field of 19, never figured in the running after making a brave start and running up with the leaders for the first half-mile. He galloped in sixteenth, almost a half-furlong behind the leaders.

Colombo's First Defeat.

Colombo, winner of seven straight races as a juvenile and his only two other starts this year, including the Two Thousand Guineas, was beaten as many expert turfmen said he would be. The distance was too great, despite the fact that his sire, Manna, won the race in 1925.

From a good start, Medieval Knight was the first to show in front. At the mile post he was still on front, but yielded the pace-setting to Tiberius as the field sped down hill on the back stretch. At Tattenham Corner, Tiberius was still in front, but Smirke had moved Windsor Lad up fast into second place. Once they headed for the judges, the Mahjaraja's colt quickly bounded to the front while Colombo swung wide. That move may have cost him the race, as Smirke took Windsor Lad the shortest way home.

Tiberius finished fourth and was trailed by Alishah, Umidwar and Valerius. The others were strung out far to the rear.

Despite the downfall of Colombo, there was a strong play for Windsor Lad. The bookmakers estimated they would pay out over £1,000,000 on the winner. The Maharajah is well and favorably known on both sides of the Atlantic as a fine sportsman. He visited the United States in 1922 and was received by the late President Harding.

Nats Resume Today With Mackmen

Ladies to Be Guests as Whitehill Opposes Marcum in Box.

By Shirley L. Povich.
(Sports Editor of The Post).

SOME unfinished business of yesterday will be taken up by the concerns of Clark Griffith and the Shibe Brothers this afternoon when the Nats and Athletics have at each other once more at Griffith Stadium.

It will be the man who pays, for the day has been set aside by Griffith as ladies day, with the female of the species invited gratis as guests of the management.

It was with seeming alacrity that Umpire in Chief Bill Dinneen called off the festivities yesterday in the fourth inning when a shower interrupted the proceedings with the two clubs deadlocked, 2 to 2. Despite the sudden departure of the leaden clouds and their watery cargoes in favor of a bright afternoon sun, Dinneen called the game off.

Dinneen Responsible.

Wet grounds was the cause, according to the announcement, but with the meager attendance present, it was a fine business stroke, although the ball park officials must necessarily be absolved, howsomever they may have been pleased. Once the game is under way, the ground crew is in charge of the umpires and the failure of Hizzoner Dinneen to order the diamond covered with the tarpaulin, which would have preserved the ball game, forced the postponement after a 20-minute wait.

Today Manager Joe Cronin will shoot the veteran left-hander, Earl Whitehill, at the Athletics, who will reply with Johnny Marcum in the pitching box. Marcum is the sensation of the waning days of the 1933 season, but he has been a drawback to the Mackmen this year.

The Nats had just succeeded in tying the score for Al Thomas in the fourth inning yesterday and they had the potential winning run on second base with one out before the rain beat down in sheets. Johnny Stone's triple, after a walk to Kuhel, was the pivotal blow that wiped out the Athletic's 2-to-0 lead. Stone scored with the tying run when Warstler muffed Travis' grounder and Cronin sacrificed Travis to second before, as repeatedly aforesaid, the game was called off.

Up to that fourth inning, Leroy Mahaffey had given the Nats only two hits, while the Athletics were scoring a run off Thomas in the first inning and another in the fourth. Cramer's duoble, a sacrifice and a fly by Johnson put the Athletics ahead, 1 to 0, and it was 2 to 0 in the fourth after Joe Kuhel dropped Cronin's throw on Johnson's grounder. Johnso scored on a sacrifice and a long fly, but it all proved to be a labor of love, or something, when Dinneen called the clubs in from the field in that fourth inning.

Phillies Triumph, 12-4, While Dodgers Suffer

Philadelphia, June 6 (AP).—All sorts of things happened to the unhappy Brooklyn Dodgers as they lost their third straight game to the Phillies today, 12 to 4.

Four pitchers were bombed out of action, Catcher Al Lopez was chased from the game by Umpire Magerkurth in the seventh, and in the same inning Lonny Frey was spiked by Dick Bartell at second base.

Phil Collins held the Dodgers until he weakened in the ninth, when Brooklyn scored twice, and Syl Johnson finished.

Walter Beck started and retired in the fourth when the Phillies scored four. Ownie Carroll went cut under a five-hit, five-run barrage in the fifth, and Ray Lucas departed after yielding three runs in the seventh. Munns finished.

Yankees Split In Bill With Red Sox

BOSTON, June 6 (AP).—The Yankees slid out of first place in the American League today by splitting a double header with the Boston Red Sox. The Detroit Tigers, by beating Cleveland, took the lead.

The Yanks had a field day in the first game, hitting Lefty Bob Grove and Henry Johnson safely 25 times to win 15 to 3, but dropped the nightcap 7 to 4 when the sox rallied for four runs in the eighth. Meryl Hoag, subbing for Babe Ruth, who took a day off, hit six straight singles in the first game.

A sudden storm in the eighth inning of the second game halted activities for 15 minutes, cooled off Grimes, who had just relieved Red Ruffing after Bob Johnson and Carl Reynolds singled, and sharpened Dick Porter's batting eye to the proper pitch. When play resumed Porter tripled, and scored later on Lary's fly. One run was in when Grimes took over.

Pirates Capture Pair From Reds, 3-1 and 5-1

Cincinnati, June 6 (AP).—Pittsburgh's Pirates gathered two games from the Cincinnati Reds today, the first by a timely single, the last by the heavy hitting of the Waner boys. The scores were 3 to 1 and 5 to 1, with the last game credited to Birkofer, a rookie pitcher from the Cincinnati sandlots.

Jensen's single in the eighth, with the bases loaded and two out, drove in two runs for Pittsburgh and broke a 1-1 tie

Comes From Far Back to Triumph

Tody West Is Second by Length; Morocen Is Third in Field.

Daily Double Pays $196 as Justa Teacher and Sambo G. Score.

By Walter Haight
(Post Staff Correspondent).

CHARLES TOWN, W. Va., June 6.—The rain came over the mountains today and turned the racing strip into a sea of mud for the first time since the meeting of the Shenandoah Valley Jockey Club got under way. However, one of the largest week-day crowds was on hand and the hoss racing went on merrily. The off-track brought several major upsets, one of which came in the feature race when Manager Bill romped home by a length to pay a $10 mutuel.

For shere enjoyment, the start of the race rivaled the finish which saw Tody West second and Morecen third. The leading man at the post was Race Street. He was in rare form as far as bad acting was concerned. He huffed and puffed and tried to blow the grandstand down. Finally the starter gave up and placed him on the outside where he gave a demonstration of acrobatics. It was the last round-up for Race Street, at Charles Town, for the stewards announced that they would refuse his entry for the remainder of the meeting.

Morocen in Front.

But to get back to the running of the six and one-half furlong race, Morocen was first to go to the front. He was followed by Race Street, the big, bad wolf. Tody West was close up and Manager Bill was getting his legs collected far back. On the back stretch, Manager Bill began to move up as Morocen continued to ankle along in front.

Making the stretch turn, Jockey Edwards swung Manager Bill through on the rail and it took no clairvoyant to tell which horse would win. Morocen folded like a camp stool and wandered into third money as Tody West gave Manager Bill a mild battle for the purse. However, the winner had a full length advantage at the wire.

A favorite, Justa Teacher, and a longshot, Sambo G., comprised the daily double which supplied a $196.20 mutuel. Sambo G. was $42.40 as an individual betting proposition. Two other substantial mutuels were recorded. Fair Billy took the fourth at $16.60 and Fusco won the final at $15.80. Favorite players were successful in the cases of Justa Teacher and Mazyniata in the sixth.

At the Post . . .

Dear Al: Charles Town, June 6.

F-I-V-E W-I-N-N-E-R-S! Pardon me for harking back a column. If I remember rightly, I said, "Mike and I are going after heavy mutuels tomorrow." Well, here they are: Fair Billy, $16.60; Fusco, $15.80; Manager Bill, $10; Jim Moss, $8.80 and Justa Teacher, $4.20. In the other two races, our second choice was second in the third and our second choice won the sixth. I'm beginning to love mountain music, particularly as played in those mutuel machines. Clocker Mike has reason to be proud tonight because he is credited with an assist in the case of three of the five winners. I may let Mike write this column when I go on a vacation next month. What do you say?

BILL.

First race—Water Lad will be favored by the off track and should do his stuff in a great big way. Hacky H. is another whichc improves in slow going, but he's hardly the Hacky H. of last year or we are being fooled. Hurry Bye won here and will be dangerous.

Second race—By Surprise ran a good race last week and meets merry-go-round horses in this field. At that, I believe we get a fair mutuel. Maple Hussy breaks off the rail, but is not much horse. Peggy Can for the show.

Third race—Bokie B. is tough enough to take care of this field even when assigned 114 pounds. Grand Box will enjoy the soft track and should get home in front of Consummation.

Fourth race—Easter Dale breaks from the inside in this 5-furlong test and may hot-foot it to the wire in time to take care of the Sea Finn, one that I would put on top if he were not assigned to the outside of the field. Maple Sue to take the show end.

Fifth race—I'm going to try to make Fair Jack lead this crew to the wire. Clocker Mike has reported favorably and that was all I was waiting for. Dixie Bee and Worthington for the place and show.

Sixth race—Muskoday will like the feel of soft footing and might run his old-time race. If he does it will be "Kitty bar the door." Jobs Dido has been improving and will be on top as far as he goes. Whirry, if sent back, may figure in the pay-off.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—JUSTA TEACHER, $4.20, $3.20, $2.40; HAIR TRIGGER, $11.80, $4.40; CROSSING OVER, $2.40.

JUSTA TEACHER, away forwardly and favoring the going, opened up a commanding lead at once, was rated in front throughout, drew out easily, and had speed in reserve. HAIR TRIGGER, closest to the winner at all times, saved ground, and held CROSSING OVER safe. The latter raced very wide at the first turn, and closed well. CANTROUD finished stoutly. LODORUS tired.

SECOND RACE—Five furlongs. Purse, $300; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:28. Off at 2:32. Winner, M. Hackett's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—JIM MOSS, $8.80, $6.80, $4.20; SMALL CHANGE, $40.40, $17.60; BULLETIN, $4.80.

JIM MOSS worked into a contending position on the inside on the back stretch, circled the leaders when on the final bend, and was going away under pressure at the finish. SMALL CHANGE raced forwardly at all times on the outside. He closed very fast. BULLETIN had good early speed, and held on well. GIGLEY ANN showed good speed to set the pace, saved ground on the rail, but weakened. PUSTA SUNBEAM raced evenly. BIG DIPPER could not improve her position.

THIRD RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $300; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:57. Off at 3:03½. Winner, Mrs. G. C. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SAMBO G., $42.40, $17.00, $5.20; WHIRRY, $4.40, $3.20; SILVER WRACK, $5.40.

SAMBO G., a forward factor all the way while being restrained, came through on the inside in the stretch, and driving hard, wore the leaders down. WHIRRY had good speed to take command on the back stretch, lost ground rounding the final bend, but held on well. SILVER WRACK had good early speed, and closed well. MOST ALWAYS, slow to begin, closed stoutly on the inside. GOLDEN CASTLE raced evenly in the early running, but stopped as though disliking the going.

FOURTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $300; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:29. Off at 3:30. Winner, W. J. Two-dollar mutuels paid—FAIR BILLY, $16.60, $4.00, $2.40; BARCELONA PETE, $2.60, $2.40; NISIA, $2.60.

FAIR BILLY, restrained in the early running, moved up stoutly on the inside when leaving the back stretch, wore down the leaders while saving ground on the rail, and had enough left to stall off BARCELONA PETE. The latter, under strong restraint in the early part, made a belated rush in the final eighth of a mile, came to the outside, and closing very fast, was wearing the winner down. NISIA had good early speed, but tired, as did TRISTRAP. LIGHT BREEZE was never a contender.

FIFTH RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $300; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:59. Off at 4:11½. Winner, N. B. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MANAGER BILL, $10.00, $4.40, $3.40; TODY WEST, $5.00, $3.40; MOROCEN, $4.20.

MANAGER BILL, slow to find his best speed, gradually bettered his position, found racing room on the inside on the turn, and wore the leaders down, while saving ground on the rail. TODY WEST, a forward factor at all times, hung on well. MOROCEN had good speed to set the pace, but weakened in the drive. RACE STREET, fractious at the post, broke from outside the stalls, raced forwardly, but weakened in the last furlong. BRIGHT BIRD and CHATTERPOL appeared to dislike the going.

SIXTH RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $300; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:35. Off at 4:38½. Winner, M. M. MAZYNIATA, at home in the going, assumed command immediately after the start, was rated in front throughout, and had enough left to hold PINK POST safe. The latter, sluggish in the early stages, closed well, and was wearing the winner down. SELFISH GAIN, forced to race wide on the first turn, had good speed on the back stretch, but faltered at the end. NAY NAY had some early speed. ZOMBRO and MISS PATCHES were never serious contenders.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $300; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:01. Off at 5:04. Winner, E. P. FUSCO, sluggish in the early stages, moved up quickly when leaving the back stretch, secured racing room on the inside to drive into command, and was under a drive to the finish. CHANGEABLE had good speed to set the pace, raced TANCRED into submission, but faltered at the end. JAMBALAYA, a forward factor at all times, closed stoutly. TANCRED had good early speed while racing on the outside of CHANGEABLE, but stopped. DARK STAR could never get up. POST BRIGADE quit

Another Important Producing Company Makes Known Its Roster for Next Year

United Artists Contribute to Season's Works

(Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.)

By Nelson B. Bell.

It was announced here yesterday that the open season was on for motion picture sales conventions. We went to some lengths, as a matter of fact, to set forth what the Fox outfit was doing. Now, it seems, the United Artists organization is doing almost as well.

The United Artists Corporation will release a minimum of 22 feature films produced in Hollywood and London, as well as 18 Walt Disney productions, on its 1934-35 program, it was announced last week by Al Lichtman, vice president and general manager, at the annual meeting of branch managers and home office executives in Chicago at the Hotel Drake.

At the conclusion of the two-day session, attended by members of the sales and production personnel, Mr. Lichtman made two startling announcements.

He said that Mary Pickford and Charles Chaplin would in all probability each make a picture thus bringing the total to 24 features.

The second announcement was that Mickey Mouse, the screen's most popular character, will be seen in his true colors for the first time. Like Walt Disney's Silly Symphonies, his Mickey Mouse productions will be entirely in Technicolor.

Participating Companies.

The producing companies whose films will be released through United Artists include Twentieth Century Pictures, Samuel Goldwyn, Reliance Pictures, London Films, Viking Productions and Walt Disney. Chaplin already has ordered his sets erected for his forthcoming, but yet untitled, film, while Miss Pickford is perfecting her story prior to production.

It also was announced that a producing alliance between A. H. Woods, New York theatrical producer, and Twentieth Century Pictures, had been formed for the purpose of creating a laboratory where future screen productions would first be perfected as stage plays. Mr. Woods will stage a number of plays in New York, the first of which is to be "The Red Cat," from the European success by Rudolph Lothar and Hans Adler. This will later be made into a motion picture, with Fredric March and Constance Bennett in the leading roles.

For the coming year Walt Disney will make nine Mickey Mouse productions and nine Silly Symphonies, all in Technicolor.

The Twentieth Century Pictures Corporation, of which Joseph M. Schenck is president and Darryl F. Zanuck vice president in charge of production, will bring forth films written by famous modern writers, as well as adaptations of a number of classics, with world-famous film stars in leading roles.

"Cellini" First.

The first on the release schedule is to be "The Affairs of Cellini," starring Fredric March and Constance Bennett, an adaptation of the Broadway success, "The Firebrand," by Edwin Justus Mayer. Frank Morgan and Fay Wray have supporting parts.

Ronald Colman will return to the screen in a sequel of his previously successful appearance as Bulldog Drummond in "Bulldog Drummond Strikes Back," with Loretta Young, Warner Oland, Charles Butterworth and Una Merkel.

The distinguished George Arliss, who scored so heavily in "The House of Rothschild," another Twentieth Century picture, will next be seen in "The Last Gentleman" with Edna May Oliver, Charlotte Henry and Ralph Morgan. Upon his return from England Mr. Arliss will make "Cardinal Richelieu." He will be supported by an all-star cast to be announced later.

"Barnum" on List.

Other equally important Twentieth Century productions include "The Mighty Barnum," a story of the world's greatest showman, with Wallace Beery and Fredric March, from the pen of Gene Fowler; a second Ronald Colman production to be known as "Clive of India," a film version of the London stage success now in its seventh capacity month; a romantic story starring Clark Gable and Constance Bennett, to be known as "It Had to Happen;" a pageant of modern America, "Forward March," with one of the largest and best known casts ever assembled for a single film, and an elaborate production of Jack London's "Call of the Wild," with an all-star cast.

Samuel Goldwyn will contribute to the United Artists list with three important productions. The first is to be an Anna Sten production in which the star of "Nana" will be seen with Fredric March. This will be "We Live Again," based on Tolstoy's immortal "Resurrection," and directed by Rouben Mamoulian.

There are, to be sure, other things that may be expected from United Artists, but that will suffice to give you a rough idea. But not, I trust, too rough.

One is interested after a night at the fights to learn, at a matutinal party in Mr. McCarney's suite at the Hotel Annapolis, that "Toots" Mondt, the heavyweight wrestler, is as smart and erudite a lad as you would care to meet in a month of blue moons of getting about; that Natie Brown can come out of ten rounds with Johnny Risko without a mark; that his wife, Jean Brown, could make the movies without half trying, she is that pretty—in a brunette way—and that Joe Turner also knows what it is all about.

A personal impression would be that Joe cheated just a bit on his gross attendance Monday night, account that was the biggest 7,000 crowd I have ever attended in a space that 12,000 or more should have occupied.

That Screen Contest.

Entries from many cities already received in the Convention Girl Movie Contest in Atlantic City forecast a difficult time for the judges.

All pictures must be in the mail by this Thursday midnight (June 7), and with time so short, a flood of envelopes and folders is arriving in every mail at the Steel Pier. Names of the 100 girls selected for the final elimination will be announced shortly after that time.

The sensational novel "Convention Girl," by George Boyle is to be produced this summer with Rose Hobart in the title role. Four important parts are to be filled by newcomers to the screen chosen by tests in Atlantic City from among the 100 whose photographs were picked.

The first entrant was Miss Rose Marie Vernon, visitor from New York, a blonde. A brunette, a blonde, a platinum and a redhead will be selected at the shore.

Girls between 18 and 25 may enter, whether married or single, amateur or professional. The producers ask simply that each aspirant mail her photograph to "Convention Girl Contest, Steel Pier, Atlantic City," and print on the back of the picture her name, address, age, weight, height and color of hair and eyes.

Luther Reed, who directed a long list of successes, will turn out Convention Girl, and will "shoot" the outdoor scenes in Atlantic City. Reed will direct the screen tests on the Steel Pier between June 14 and 20, and will present each of the 100 finalists with the film of her test. A girl showing sufficient promise may be given an option contract, it was announced.

The photoplay is to be made by Falcon Pictures Corporation, formerly the David M. Thomas Pictures Corporation.

More Flora and Fauna.

That rabbit is doing all right, but the roses are not!

To Be Admired on Local Screens

Above, at left, is Diana Wynyard, talented young English actress, who has caught on so well with Clive Brook in "Where Sinners Meet"—a gross misnomer for the screen version of A. A. Milne's "The Dover Road"—that the picture is being held through Saturday of the current week, despite a normal Friday opening day for new bills at RKO-Keith's. At right is Mr. Franchot Tone, appearing opposite Joan Crawford in "Sadie McKee," coming to the Palace on Friday.

BLACKIE BEAR

By D. SAM COX

By D. Sam Cox.

Who Shot Uncle Joe's Gun?

When Jocko shot Uncle Joe's gun, it woke Aunt Judy. When Uncle Joe got to the door she met him, and she excitedly asked:

"Did you get him?"

"Get nothing," said Uncle Joe. "He got me, or most did. I must have dozed off for a minute, and the first thing I knew somebody had shot twice right over my head. Of course, it wasn't Blackie, for he can't shoot a gun. It was sure enough somebody, but I can't even guess who it was."

Uncle Joe's eyes looked like they would pop out. Aunt Judy would tell you till this day that he was the worst scared man she ever saw.

"Well, what are you going to do?" she asked, as he shoved past her into the house.

"I am going into this house and into my bed. If that man wants any of my chickens or geese or anything else, he may help himself. He won't get me."

And Uncle Joe slammed the door and locked it and put up the bar, and then set a chair against it. They went to bed, but it was a long time before they could get to sleep. They lay there listening for another shot, for they were sure that whoever it was that shot the gun would go on to the barnyard and shoot a sheep or turkey or something. They were so scared that they would talk in whispers. They laid there ever so long and listened, but there wasn't a single bit of noise, and so after a while they went to sleep.

Early next morning Uncle Joe got up and went out to see what sort of tracks he could find around the well. He was sure they would be the tracks of a big man. But there were no man tracks there. There were only all those animal tracks that were there the day before. And there lay his gun right beside the well, where he was sitting last night when he went to sleep. Then Aunt Judy came out to look for tracks, but she couldn't find a thing but dog tracks and bear tracks and coon tracks and all the other tracks that were there the day before.

"Now look here, Joe, what on earth is the matter with you?" said Aunt Judy. "There hasn't been a soul here. It looks to me just like you have only had a wild dream about Blackie, and shot the gun while you were asleep, and the noise woke you up. That bump on your head that Howler gave you must have scrambled your brains. I'll go and make you some coffee, and then maybe you will feel better. You had better lie around the house today, and let me keep a poultice on your head."

Uncle Joe couldn't dispute the fact that there were no man tracks in the yard, and so he couldn't argue the point with Aunt Judy. It did look like she was right, and that he had just had a Blackie Bear dream. And he did feel mightily like lying around the house and nursing his sore head, so he went on in for his coffee.

Radio Waves and Ripples

TO a dyed-in-the-wool party-line listener like ourself, Columbia's scheduling of a "listen-in" broadcast from the Chinatown telephone exchange in San Francisco is downright discouraging.

Seven dialects they speak out there, all Chinese. The broadcast will be made Friday, June 15, and here it is Thursday, already. And it took us six precious weeks to learn how to say "Please pass the salt" in French.

We understand that when a Chinatown operator asks, "Dar huey bin she ah?" she means, "Number, please?" What happens next is largely a matter of conjecture in any language.

We understand also that the Chinese, wise in the foibles of a Western world, have little or no faith in numbers. When they want to speak to Quang Lee or Wo Shing, they ask for either of the gentlemen without bothering to remember his number. And if the operator gives them Tai Chung Wah, the great Chinese Theater, instead, they raise particular Chinese cain. They lead simple, direct lives, these lords of rice and tea.

We are thinking seriously of asking our laundryman in for dinner that night.

Presidents, kings and diplomats have been the specialty of WJSV's Bob Trout. If he called them by anything but their names it was "the gentleman," of course. The same for Cabinet members, brain trusters, even Congressmen.

But when Bob insisted upon describing last Monday night's boxing show in this wise: "The two gentlemen are now . . ." Chief Engineer Les Bowman objected.

One has to draw the line somewhere.

THE history of the famous Second Division of the A. E. F.—whining shells, heaving mud, blood, gas, glory—has been transcribed from the records of the War Department for the first time and has been woven into drama especially for the Second Division Association, meeting in New York tomorrow.

From a sound-proof, air-conditioned room the men who staged the original drama in France 16 years ago will witness its reenactment from 10 to 11 a. m. With them and their wives and children will be some of their war-time commanders, including Maj. Gen. James G. Harbord, now chairman of the board of R. C. A., and Maj. Gen. Paul B. Malone, now commander of the Third Corps Area, Baltimore.

The drama's script was written and the material for it gathered by Burke Boyce, head of N. B. C.'s continuity department. He spent several days in Washington digging through musty files with Capt. C. O. Mattfeldt, secretary of the association. He studied maps and detailed monographs of the action at Chateau Thierry and Soissons before sitting down to write—for 48 hours.

You may quote them as saying:

Edwin C. Hill—"I believe in romance for radio. Listeners don't want the glamour of sophistication, but the glamour of romance and sentiment. The strong and simple things are the order of the day."

Poley McClintock — "For years I thought I had a frog in my throat . . . my voice really resembles that of the bycantistis cristatus."

Gracie Allen—"What do I have to make a quote for? My brother has a quote with two pairs of pants."

We have news for the Crosby and Vallee adherents.

Russ Colombo is returning to the air via N. B. C. Sunday with an orchestra and Jimmy Fidler, one of Hollywood's professional gossipers.

Just why should we suppose —now that we think of it—that Crosby and Vallee adherents should also find something particularly delectable about Colombo's romantic barytoning? We seem to remember quite a number of people to whom Colombo was bread and meat who couldn't abide either Crosby or Vallee.

The strangest marine museum in the world is located in Seattle, Wash., where the specimens are exhibited just as they come from the water. They are neither stuffed nor embalmed, intense cold is the only preservative used—and it keeps the exhibits in an uncannily natural appearance.

The museum was started 10 or 12 years ago when a fisherman brought in an enormous sun fish which he had caught. The fish was mounted in the cold room of the Spokane Street Terminal. The idea took with other fishermen and ever since then when an unusual or rare fish or other marine creature is taken it generally becomes an addition to the frozen museum.

On display are dozens of various strange fish not often seen, a sea lion, hair and fur seals, octopi, dog fish, flying fish, sleeper sharks, sea poachers, grunt fish, singing fish, stringerees, rat fish—even a young whale is on display. Altogether there are about 300 exhibits.

The remarkable display draws thousands of overcoated sightseers to the terminal annually.

Egypt's female "king," Hat-shepsut, was the daughter of Thotmes I, sister and queen of Thotmes II, after whom she came into power and declared herself "king." She wore an artificial beard and caused her images to be masculine. As a warrior she failed, however, and military inactivity of her reign cost Egypt its power in Asia. Succeeding monarchs discredited her, and caused her name to be struck from her temples.

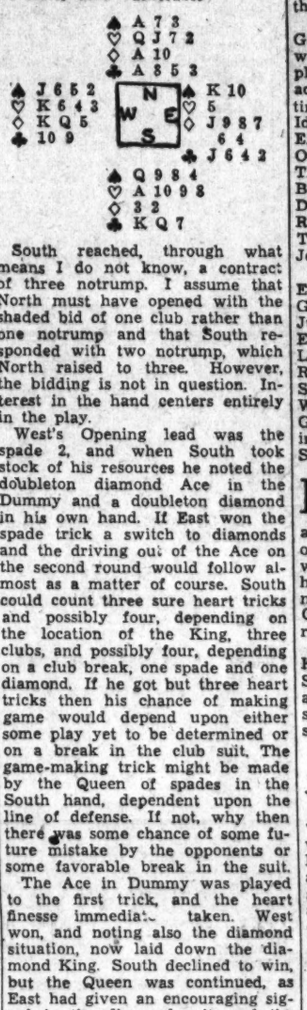
Planning the Course of Play.

When a partnership has reached a contract of three notrump and a small card has been led of the suit in which the Declarer holds the Ace in the Dummy and the Queen in his own hand, the natural impulse, all other things being equal, is to play low and hope to win a trick with the Queen on the first round or to establish the Queen as a trick winner for a later round provided Third Hand holds the King. This is a sound principle but is subject to modification, particularly in cases where there is an unopened suit, the leading of which by either adversary would make impossible the fulfillment of the contract. In such cases as that the Declarer, of course, takes careful stock of his combined resources to determine if there is a possible manner of fulfilling his contract by refusing the "free finese."

The hand below, which was sent to me by Mr. E. C. Welsh, of Kansas City, Mo., is an example where South, if he permits East to win the first trick, can not fulfill his contract because the powerful element of time will then run in favor of the defending side.

South, Dealer
Neither side vulnerable



South reached, through what means I do not know, a contract of three notrump. I assume that North must have opened with the shaded bid of one club rather than one notrump and that South responded with two notrump, which North raised to three. However, the bidding is not in question. Interest in the hand centers entirely in the play.

West's Opening lead was the spade 2, and when South took stock of his resources he noted the doubleton diamond Ace in the Dummy and a doubleton diamond in his own hand. If East won the spade trick a switch to diamonds and the driving out of the Ace on the second round would follow almost as a matter of course. South could count three sure heart tricks and possibly four, depending on the location of the King, three clubs, and possibly four, depending on a club break, one spade and one diamond. If he got but three heart tricks then his chance of making game would depend upon either some play yet to be determined or on a break in the club suit. The game-making trick might be made by the Queen of spades in the South hand, dependent upon the line of defense. If not, why then there was some chance of some future mistake by the opponents or some favorable break in the suit.

The Ace in Dummy was played to the first trick, and the heart finesse immediately taken. West won, and noting also the diamond situation, now laid down the diamond King. South declined to win, but the Queen was continued, as East had given an encouraging signal in the diamond suit, and the Ace was forced out. South now ran three established hearts, and East, who held the spade King and protection against the running of four clubs, was forced to make three diamond discards. East was now placed in the lead with the spade King and cashed his remaining diamond, but the Declarer then made the balance of the tricks with the Ace, King and Queen of clubs and the Queen of spades.

It is quite true that South could not have anticipated the entire line of play which developed but it is equally true that the play he adopted gave the greater opportunity for success.

This typical young Kentucky woman and man did not appear Monday in Ole Kaintuck's day in the Parade of States because we became so interested in that great State and its many prominent people in Washington that we ran far over our space quota. Hence, Kentucky receives special recognition today in addition to its regular place in the Diary's Parade. We are proud to present Miss Nancy J. Pigg, of Catlettsburg, as the typical Kentucky girl. Miss Pigg is chief of Disbursements Division, FDIC, a position of high responsibility. Charles Gordon Carr, of Sturgis, is an ambitious Kentuckian who is employed at Division of Investigation, Justice. BALANCED CORD CONSTRUCTION

WHAT MILLER BALANCED CORD CONSTRUCTION DOES

2. Provides a balanced distribution of load-strain over a uniformly strong carcass.

1. Each cord in the entire carcass of the new Miller De Luxe is carefully and completely coated with springy white cushion gum. No rubbing against other cords . . . no cross threads to "see-saw" as the tire flexes, bends, and twists in service.

2. Each cord in the entire carcass is carefully placed under a uniform tension with every other cord. No overstrain . . . no cords required to carry more than their equal share of the load.

Stock Rallies Slowing Down To Fractions

Oils and Metals Prove Exceptions; Sales Cut to 665,900 Shares.

New York, June 6 (AP).—Except for oils, metals and scattered issues, rallying power in the stock market played out today.

Although the Wall street atmosphere seemed clear of a good deal of its recent pessimism, bulls were reluctant to follow the recovery movement until news was more favorable.

Firmness in bonds and most active commodities supported a good undertone in stocks, but the rally the past two days had gone far enough to invite profit taking by traders. Supply of stock increased as the market approximated the tops of the narrow range it had occupied since midday.

Earnings Aid Oils.

A shift into oil shares was motivated in part by further consideration of the high monthly rate of earnings by Standard of New Jersey, as disclosed officially in its annual meeting yesterday. It was assumed other companies probably were sharing in the improvement.

Standard Oil of New Jersey, Standard of California, Atlantic Refining, Amerada and Consolidated Oil rose fractionally to about 3 points.

Losses of Fractions.

Losses of minor fractions were recorded for American Telephone, U. S. Steel, General Motors, Chrysler, Santa Fe, Pennsylvania and other key issues.

Trading dwindled as the rally was checked after further modest gains in early trading. Sales on the stock exchange totaled 665,900 shares, against 741,160 in the preceding session.

With inflationary sentiment still lurking in the background, traders leaned to the buying side. Sterling and other foreign exchanges moved up against the dollar. War debt considerations influenced movement of foreign currencies.

Mixed Trade News.

Mixed trade news provided markets with no cause for enthusiasm. Although a little more optimistic in tone, the Iron Age weekly review coupled a further rise of 1 point in steel operations, to 60 per cent of capacity, with inventory buying on steel strike threats and to take advantage of expiring low prices. Memorial Day influenced a falling off in car loadings and electric power production last week.

Wide fluctuations were recorded for a few stocks in thin trading. Mexican Petroleum, which rarely trades, jumped 10 points on a small transaction. Norfolk & Western spurted 8 points to 80, within 2 points of the 1934 peak. Santa Fe preferred moved up 2½ points in belated response to declaration of the semiannual preferred dividend yesterday.

Metal shares were stimulated by strength in silver futures. Efforts by the Senate silver bloc to eliminate the 50 per cent tax on speculative profits in the silver bill apparently raised traders' hopes.

Robey's Review

Finance Economics Business

More and More Evidence Indicates That Housing Bill Is Basically Only Another Scheme for Giving "Recovery" a Shot in the Arm.

By Ralph West Robey

Day by day it is becoming clearer that the housing bill now before Congress has, in the mind of the Administration, only an incidental relation to improving living conditions in the country along sound economic lines. Most recent of the official bits of evidence along this line are the clear-cut intimation that Mr. Harry Hopkins will be the head of the organization and the insistence that the bill be passed by this session of Congress. Both of these actions can be interpreted only as indicating that the housing bill is to be a "recovery" measure.

As a "recovery" measure there is virtually nothing good that can be said for this bill. If it were to be used for an overhauling of the American mortgage business, the case would be different. For years our mortgage business has been more in need of structural reform than any other part of the financial system. Something was done in this direction through the creation of the farm loan system in 1916, but in the urban field conditions have remained chaotic.

Bill Could Confer Lasting Benefits Upon the Country.

Were the housing bill to be used to overhaul the urban mortgage business, accordingly, it would confer a lasting and fundamental benefit upon society. It would mean that home owners and potential home builders could get needed funds at a reasonable rate of interest and under more desirable conditions as to maturities. In a word, it would introduce into the urban field the same kind of reforms that were attempted, and to a marked extent realized, under the farm loan system.

There is little or no chance, however, that the measure will be used in this way if it is coupled with the idea of giving "recovery" another shot in the arm. Overhauling a financial system, at best, is a slow and exceedingly difficult task. It is not something that can be done in a matter of weeks. And certainly it is not something that can be done in an effective and sound manner quickly enough to alter materially the business picture between now and the fall elections.

As a Recovery Measure Reforms Will Not Be Made.

If the bill is used as a "recovery" measure, therefore, it means, not the making of needed reforms, but rather that we shall have another siege of extravagance and waste. Instead of getting a condition wherein the homeowner genuinely is benefited as a class, we shall have a situation where money is poured out in such volume that the resulting debts can not be carried. This in turn will mean that sooner or later the Government will have to step in with a new "program"—a "program" designed to enable the homeowners to carry their debt burden.

I am willing to admit, of course, that such a result need not be the outcome of passage of the bill. In other words, the bill does not make graft, extravagence and waste mandatory. It is for this reason that the bill has such a wide appeal to those sincerely interested in a reform of the urban mortgage business. There is little use to praise the potential benefits of a measure, however, if it is to be used in such a manner that these ideals can not possibly be realized. And all the present indications are, as stated above, that the primary purpose of the housing bill is not to reform the mortgage business, but to give the Administration another weapon for getting more money in circulation—and getting it in circulation fast enough to allay the growing criticism of the New Deal.

Bond Market Is Firmer on Heavier Sales

Federal Loans Turn Quiet; Turnover Mounts to $12,521,000.

New York, June 6 (AP).—Bonds displayed further firmness today although gains for the most part were modest and there were a sufficient number of scattered losses to temper bullish enthusiasm.

Due to an increased demand for some of the Federal issues, the trading volume expanded to $12,521,000, par value, against $10,803,000 yesterday.

United States Loans Quiet.

Treasury securities were quiet and rather narrow. There was a run on Home Owners Loan 4s. This issue accounted for nearly $3,000,000 of a turnover of about $3,900,000 in the Federal section. It showed a gain of two-thirty-seconds of a point.

Prices of the new 3s and 2⅛s, traded over the counter on a "when issued" basis, were about unchanged.

The majority of prime investment corporation bonds were steady to higher. Such issues as Santa Fe adjustment 4s, Cincinnati Gas 4s, Southern Railway general 4s, Union Pacific refunding 4s and Pennsylvania general 4½s edged up to new highs for the year or longer.

List of Gainers.

Gains of fractions to a point or more were recorded by some issues of Alleghany Corp., American Chain, Baltimore & Ohio, Boston & Maine, Chesapeake Corp., Chicago & North Western, Colorado & Southern, Consolidated Gas, Denver & Rio Grande, Erie, Great Northern, International Paper, K. C. Ft. Scott & Memphis, "Soo" Line, Missouri Pacific, Nickel Plate, Northern Pacific, Pennsylvania, Otis Steel, Southern Pacific, Studebaker, Utilities Power & Light, Vanadium, Wabash and Western Maryland.

Union Pacific first 4s lost more than a point and declines were suffered by various loans of Remington Rand, Postal Telegraph, N. Y. Central, National Dairy, Canadian Pacific.

Foreign obligations were irregular. Improvement was shown by bonds of Argentina, Sao Paulo and Great Britain. German 5½s rallied slightly, but the Reich 7s lost more than a point and registered another new low for the year. Some of the Berlin loans dropped nearly six points.

Curb's Prices Display Mixed Tone at Close

Slight Gains Are Made; Transfers Decline to 126,000 Shares.

New York, June 6 (AP).—The curb had a mixed tone at the close today, but despite profit-taking in some of the recent gainers a number of shares improved—particularly oils.

Variations in final quotations were mostly within fractional limits. Around mid-session the list was generally higher, but scattered offerings appeared near the finish.

Gulf Oil, firm yesterday, advanced 3⅛ points to close at 63. Other petroleum shares showing fractional improvement included Humble Oil, International Petroleum, Standard Oils of Indiana and Ohio.

Electric Bond & Share common eased slightly, but the senior issues were firm. Hiram Walker dipped a point, while Pittsburgh Plate Glass advanced as much. Lake Shore was a shade lower, Swift & Co. and Greyhound corporations closed steady.

(Associated Press.)

Chamber of Commerce of the United States experts estimate that a billion dollars in new corporate financing may be expected during the balance of this year as a result of the amendment of the Securities Act.

A further incentive to such financing, the experts report, would be an amendment to the Federal Bankruptcy Act, which they say is expected to pass, which would exempt securities issued pursuant to a reorganization plan when confirmed by a court in accordance with the act.

These changes, the experts said, in the chamber's fortnightly review, "combined with the prevailing low interest rates, have led to new estimates of the possibility of long-term issues being offered and absorbed.

"The chamber's finance department figures that there is now thrashing around in the capital market funds that normally would be employed in long-term investment in an amount exceeding $2,000,000,000. This sum is exclusive of the volume of funds that mainly seeks the direct mortgage type of security.

"The department further estimates that the volume of corporate financing that could be expected for the balance of the year, conditioned upon satisfactory changes in Federal laws bearing directly on the origination and distribution of securities, ranges around one billion and, for the next 12-month period, between a billion and two billion."

Of similar intent is word reaching officials of a great many prospective issues that, according to their sponsors, have been retarded by the Securities Act. Officials have no estimate of their total, but expect that it will be unusually large, compared with recent months.

Another important angle is the fact that many securities that have gone through the legal mill of being registered by the Trade Commission have not actually been placed on the market, due to the fears of the issuers. It is expected that many of these isesues will be reregistered and immediately offered to investors.

Cotton's Gain Is Trimmed Under Selling

July Closes at 11.94 as General Market Rises 1 to 5 Points.

New York, June 6 (AP).—A further advance in cotton was followed by reactions today, under realizing and scattered selling promoted by reports of slightly freer offerings from the South and reactions in the wheat market.

October sold off from 12.26 to 12.11, or about 15 points from the early highs and closed at 12.17, with the market steady at net advances of 1 to 5 points.

The opening was firm at an advance of 8 to 10 points on a continuation of the recent buying movement which was encouraged by reports of more rain in the Eastern belt and a slightly better business in cotton goods late yesterday.

Inflation Development.

Part of the buying was again attributed to expectations of inflation developments in one form or another, but nothing more definite was noted in that connection and the advance of about 60 to 70 points from the low level of last Thursday met considerable realizing, as well as a little more scattered Southern selling.

This supplied the initial demand and realizing became more active after the publication of the weekly weather report which appeared to be a disappointment to some recent buyers, and a disposition to take profits on long cotton was increased by the action of the grain market.

July contracts which had sold at 12.02 early, eased off to 11.89 during the afternoon, while December declined from 12.35 to 12.23, making reactions of 12 to 15 points from the best and net declines of 2 to 3 points. Buying continued at the decline, however, and closing prices showed rallies of 5 to 7 points from the lowest.

Weekly Weather Report.

The weekly weather report of the Weather Bureau said that in general the weather was less favorable for cotton and that there was too much rain in most of the Atlantic area. It added that rain was needed in Texas, but said the crop there was withstanding the dryness well and continued mostly in fair shape. Houses with foreign connections were among the buyers early, and Japanese interests were credited with buying again later in the day.

According to a report published by one of the trade papers this morning, planting was nearly completed and cotton up to a stand in most sections of the South. The advance in sterling came in for some comment during the day, but apparently without much effect on the market.

The scattered Southern selling reported during the morning was not active enough to make much impression, but was accompanied by reports that the advance had brought out a little more cotton from the interior in some sections.

Moderately Bullish.

The weekly report of the Weather Bureau was regarded as moderately bullish, but apparently placed less emphasis on unfavorable conditions than some recent buyers had anticipated.

Exports today 10,455, making 6,996,264 so far this season. Port receipts, 4,629. U. S. port stocks, 2,774,263.

Trade Trends.

(Associated Press.)

Sugar—Shipments of raws from Puerto Rico to the United States from January 1 to June 2 totaled 450,149 short tons against 429,629 during the same period last year, according to cable advices to the New York Coffee & Sugar Exchange. Refined shipments amounted to 63,260 tons against 50,477 for the 1933 period.

Soap—One of the leading producers has announced price advances, effective immediately, averaging 3 per cent on all its products. It is expected in the trade that other advances will follow from time to time until the cost of the recently effected excise tax on cocoanut and other imported oils used in soap manufacture is passed on to the consumer.

Construction—Moderate gains in the construction industry this year have fallen short of expectations, says the current issue of the Index, published by the New York Trust Co. "Nevertheless," adds the survey, "its prospects have improved, and while the present rate of activity is very low, figures on contract awards for the first four months of the current year represent an increase of more than 100 per cent over the corresponding period of 1933."

Steel scrap—No. 1 heavy scrap material in the Pittsburgh market is down another 25 cents, a new low of $11.50-$12 a ton. Interests in the market believe quotations would improve from these levels with the removal of steel industry labor difficulties.

Flour—Production in May in the principal milling centers of the United States amounted to 4,993,003 barrels, compared with 5,920,003 barrels in the same month last year, General Mills, Inc., reports.

Commodity prices—After rising to 112.95 on June 1, the high for the current year, the Dun & Bradstreet daily weighted price index of 30 basic commodities (wholesale) receded to 111.59 on June 4 following the break in grain prices. At this position it is only 1.93 points below the 1933 peak, which was reached on July 18.

Chemicals—Manufacturers of chromic acid report a well maintained demand in spite of slackened operations in the automotive industry. Shipments of copper sulphate are holding in good volume for the account of the agricultural trade.

Fuel oil—The market shows some weakness, particularly on the No. 4 product, which two of the large independent companies are reported marketing in tank wagons at 6½ cents a gallon against the 7-cent price posted by most of the big oil companies.

French Ship 1 Million In Gold to America

Cherbourg, France, June 6 (AP).—Twelve hundred kilograms of bar gold, valued at $1,213,290, was shipped on the S. S. Bremen today for the United States. It was consigned to the Chase National Bank of New York.

Cotton's Gain Is Trimmed Under Selling

July Closes at 11.94 as General Market Rises 1 to 5 Points.

New York, June 6 (AP).—A further advance in cotton was followed by reactions today, under realizing and scattered selling promoted by reports of slightly freer offerings from the South and reactions in the wheat market.

October sold off from 12.26 to 12.11, or about 15 points from the early highs and closed at 12.17, with the market steady at net advances of 1 to 5 points.

The opening was firm at an advance of 8 to 10 points on a continuation of the recent buying movement which was encouraged by reports of more rain in the Eastern belt and a slightly better business in cotton goods late yesterday.

Inflation Development.

Part of the buying was again attributed to expectations of inflation developments in one form or another, but nothing more definite was noted in that connection and the advance of about 60 to 70 points from the low level of last Thursday met considerable realizing, as well as a little more scattered Southern selling.

This supplied the initial demand and realizing became more active after the publication of the weekly weather report which appeared to be a disappointment to some recent buyers, and a disposition to take profits on long cotton was increased by the action of the grain market.

July contracts which had sold at 12.02 early, eased off to 11.89 during the afternoon, while December declined from 12.35 to 12.23, making reactions of 12 to 15 points from the best and net declines of 2 to 3 points. Buying continued at the decline, however, and closing prices showed rallies of 5 to 7 points from the lowest.

Weekly Weather Report.

The weekly weather report of the Weather Bureau said that in general the weather was less favorable for cotton and that there was too much rain in most of the Atlantic area. It added that rain was needed in Texas, but said the crop there was withstanding the dryness well and continued mostly in fair shape. Houses with foreign connections were among the buyers early, and Japanese interests were credited with buying again later in the day.

According to a report published by one of the trade papers this morning, planting was nearly completed and cotton up to a stand in most sections of the South. The advance in sterling came in for some comment during the day, but apparently without much effect on the market.

The scattered Southern selling reported during the morning was not active enough to make much impression, but was accompanied by reports that the advance had brought out a little more cotton from the interior in some sections.

Moderately Bullish.

The weekly report of the Weather Bureau was regarded as moderately bullish, but apparently placed less emphasis on unfavorable conditions than some recent buyers had anticipated.

Exports today 10,455, making 6,996,264 so far this season. Port receipts, 4,629. U. S. port stocks, 2,774,263.

Trade Trends.

(Associated Press.)

Sugar—Shipments of raws from Puerto Rico to the United States from January 1 to June 2 totaled 450,149 short tons against 429,629 during the same period last year, according to cable advices to the New York Coffee & Sugar Exchange. Refined shipments amounted to 63,260 tons against 50,477 for the 1933 period.

Soap—One of the leading producers has announced price advances, effective immediately, averaging 3 per cent on all its products. It is expected in the trade that other advances will follow from time to time until the cost of the recently effected excise tax on cocoanut and other imported oils used in soap manufacture is passed on to the consumer.

Construction—Moderate gains in the construction industry this year have fallen short of expectations, says the current issue of the Index, published by the New York Trust Co. "Nevertheless," adds the survey, "its prospects have improved, and while the present rate of activity is very low, figures on contract awards for the first four months of the current year represent an increase of more than 100 per cent over the corresponding period of 1933."

Steel scrap—No. 1 heavy scrap material in the Pittsburgh market is down another 25 cents, a new low of $11.50-$12 a ton. Interests in the market believe quotations would improve from these levels with the removal of steel industry labor difficulties.

Flour—Production in May in the principal milling centers of the United States amounted to 4,993,003 barrels, compared with 5,920,003 barrels in the same month last year, General Mills, Inc., reports.

Commodity prices—After rising to 112.95 on June 1, the high for the current year, the Dun & Bradstreet daily weighted price index of 30 basic commodities (wholesale) receded to 111.59 on June 4 following the break in grain prices. At this position it is only 1.93 points below the 1933 peak, which was reached on July 18.

Chemicals—Manufacturers of chromic acid report a well maintained demand in spite of slackened operations in the automotive industry. Shipments of copper sulphate are holding in good volume for the account of the agricultural trade.

Fuel oil—The market shows some weakness, particularly on the No. 4 product, which two of the large independent companies are reported marketing in tank wagons at 6½ cents a gallon against the 7-cent price posted by most of the big oil companies.

French Ship 1 Million In Gold to America

Cherbourg, France, June 6 (AP).—Twelve hundred kilograms of bar gold, valued at $1,213,290, was shipped on the S. S. Bremen today for the United States. It was consigned to the Chase National Bank of New York.

Sanders Dead From Auto Injuries

Richmond U. Box Star First Thought Not Critically Hurt; Sought by Nats.

RICHMOND, June 6 (Spl.).—George Sanders, ace sophomore pitcher at the University of Richmond, died at 5:20 a. m. today at Johnston-Willis Hospital of injuries received in an automobile accident Saturday night. His condition at first had not been considered serious.

Sanders, whose home was in Whitestone, had been considered one of the South's finest pitching prospects. He was offered a contract this year by Washington and scouts from Detroit, the Yankees and the Cardinals had ben on his trail this year. He was 19 years old and was a southpaw.

With two friends, he was heading for Fork Union on Saturday night. In trying to pass another car, the automobile in which the three were riding skidded over a high bank and turned over several times.

Leg Is Broken.

Sanders was the only one badly hurst, a leg being broken between the knee and thigh. It was three hours before he reached the hospital in Richmond and he was brought in also suffering badly from shock.

Doctors did not consider his case dangerous, although they were fearful that the injury might impair his future pitching. His leg, however, was badly torn internally and hemorraghes developed. He sank into a coma Sunday. His parents hurried here Saturday night and were with him.

This year, his first as a college pitcher, young Sanders won eight games and lost two.

Ahearn Signs Jacobs and Zodda

Hard-Hitting Boys Meet in Semifinal Battle at Hunt Club.

EVIDENTLY determined to dedicate his future programs to the scuffle type rather than the whirling dervish class of boxers, Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn has signed Joey Zodda and Stumpy Jacobs, two biff-bang lightweights, for a six-round semifinal on his Ridin gand Hunt Club card Monday night.

With the ten-round final bout between Ray Bowen, of Washington, and Frankie Petrolle, of New York, already formally signed, the top encounters of the 34-round bill have been completed.

Zodda is a legitimate lightweight. As a featherweight he developed speed and punch, but outgrew the cless before he could gather unto himself many laurels. Maxie Koshover, Phil Baker and George Russo have been recent victims of his ability.

Jacobs is well known in this bailiwick. A regular performer at Portner's, he has tussled with Benny Bass, Jack Portney, Joey Goodman and others, with varying degrees of success.

Seaman Is Signed To Fight Wolgast

Meets Flyweight King Wednesday at Portner's.

Sammy Seaman, Pacific Coast bantamweight champion and a protege of Fidel La Barba and George Blake, yesterday was selected to do 10-round fistic battle with "Midget" Wolgast, generally recognized world's flyweight champion, at Portner Arena next Wednesday night.

Weighing well within the 120-pound limit specified by Wolgast and coming to Alexandria and Washington rings under the direction of colorful Jimmy Erwin, Seaman promises Wolgast much stouter opposition than that furnished the dazzling speedster by Billy Landers at Portner's two years ago.

A consensus of the leading pros shows that 288 probably will be the winning total for this 72-hole grind. With 1 8additional holes scheduled Friday, and the grand 36 Saturday, indications are that the eventual winner may wait until the stretch to turn on the heat.

Union Bridge Defeats Littlestown Nine, 5-2

Union Bridge, Md., June 5 (Spl.). Union Bridge team, of the Frederick County League, set back Littlestown, (Pa.) Athletic Club in a good game before a large crowd at the local park, 5-to-2.

The tilt was a battle between the hurlers, Crouse and Lasek, in which the former had a slight edge. Crouse held Littletown to six hits, one a double, two of which came in the seventh inning and accounted for two runs. Union Bridge rapped Lasek for nine hits, including two doubles. The locals won the game in the first inning by scoring three runs. Lasek then settled down and held the home team scoreless until the seventh frame when two more were put across.

Indian Spring Ace Winner of Medal, Breaking Par by 3 Strokes.

ROGER PEACOCK, the Indian Spring Club's amateur golf champion of Maryland, won the medal in the qualifying round of the Beaver Dam invitation tournament with a sub-par round of *9, tying the noncompetitive record of Martin McCarthy for the course and setting a new competitive record. Peacock set this record due to the skillful use of a putter and to some finely polished iron shots. He played the first nine in 34, 2 under par, and came back in 35, 1 under par for his 69.

Birdie 2 on Second.

Peacock started his fireworks on the second hole, where he was short on the green in 2. His third shot hit short of the pin and found its way to the bottom of the cup for a birdie 3. On the third hole another birdie was scored with a 15-foot putt. On the rest of the nine Peacock played faultless golf, getting par on every hole.

Starting on the second nine with a course record in view, he birdied the first hole with a 10-foot putt. For the next five holes he played par golf.

His only mistake came on the sixteenth hole, where he went over par with a 6. Peacock was short of the green in 2. His third shot was badly missed and found a trap to the right of the green. He was on the green in 4 and took two putts for a 6.

But on the next hole Peacock came right back with a birdie deuce and finished on the home hole with a 4. His 20-foot putt on the eighteenth hole hung on the lip for his par.

Gallagher Set For Galento

Signs for 10-Round Feature at Griffith Stadium on June 15.

MARTY GALLAGHER, Washington's heavyweight contender, yesterday signed the formal articles that will take him into a ten-round war with Tony Galento, New Jersey knockout artist, in the second of Joe Turner's outdoor boxing cards to be presented at Griffith Satdium June 15. The three-way agreement between Gallagher, Turner and Jimmy Erwin, who represented Galento, was reached only after several days of bickering, which culminted in a heated session in Turner's offices at the Annapolis Hotel last night.

Scaling 203 pounds yesterday afternoon, Gallagher was obviously in better condition than he ever has been for a local contest, for all of which he has tipped the beam at 206 or more. The local heavyweight will continue heavy training at the Jewish Community Center this week and will take to the woods in a secluded camp near TB, Md., Monday, to apply the finishing touches.

Galento at Top Form.

Galento also is in the very best of condition at the present time, having been in strict training for the past three weeks in preparation for a bout with Dynamite Jackson as a semifinal to the Carnera-Baer bout. The pudgy New Jersey knockerout was granted special permission by Madison Square Garden to withdraw from the bout in order to fight Gallagher.

Promoter Turner and Matchmaker Mann have planned an outstanding supporting card, which will feature Les Kennedy, a ranking local heavyweight, against Steve Dudas, Billy McCarney's sensational big boy who stole the show from Brown and Risko in an eight-round semifinal.
